VACCINATION.

THE Kine Poek is now universally & justly acknowledged to afford as an easy remedy if made use of, to preserve us from the Small Pox. It is too true, however, we seem already too inattentive to its incomparable virtues, that for the summer last past, it was with the greatest difficulty a sufficient number of inocu- lations could be performed, to keep the matter alive.

Have nevertheless, heretofore succeeded to preserve the vaccine infection without any in- terruption, and am now well provided with active matter, which it will afford me great pleasure to distribute among those physicians who have not yet been supplied; and I hope every citizen who has occasion and is attentive to the welfare of his family, will employ us dur- ing this health season, to perform this simple but highly necessary and important operation.

JAMES SMITH, Vaccine Institution, Chatham-street. d4t]]
