A Minister Wanted.
William and Mary Parish, in Saint Mary's county, is vacant, and a Minister much wanted. All the advantages taken into view, this may be considered as one of the best country parishes in the state; it has belonging to it a glebe, containing upwards of 300 acres of most valuable farming Land, which, when well cultivated, has never failed to yield a handsome support for a family; it lies in a healthy, thick settled neighborhood, on a large extensive creek, abounding at all seasons of the year with the finest fish and oysters, with a comfortable Dwelling House, with three rooms on a floor, and all necessary out houses; the annual value may be estimated at 200 dollars, the vestry having refused that sum for it for the ensuing year, and the subscriptions have generally amounted to 300 dollars per annum. To a Clergyman wishing a permanent settlement, these, with the other advantages attached to the situation, merit attention.

IMPORTANT LAW REPORT.

Court of Admiralty, London, October 28.

American ship Orion, M'Millan, master.

This vessel was bound from the Baltic to N. York, and detained by the Hero privateeer, of Plymouth, A. G. Brewett, commander.

The right hon. sir William Scott, after hearing the argument on both sides, gave the following sentence.

"This is the case of an American ship clearly admitted as such, and no one objection had been taken to the property there of; and taken on on a voyage from from a neutral port to her own country It was also admitted that the Americen cargo was fully documented, and the objections taken to a part of it are without effect, as it is clear that that part also belongs to the person for whom it is claimed.

"The only question for me to determine is—Whether as this capture in the first instance, appears to have been perfectly causless, the captors are not to indemnify the claimants?

"I am of opinion that it was a neutral ship, taken upon a fair neutral voyage, and unjustifiably detained a length of time.—I do therefore think, that I should justify in a very high degree the complaints which have been thrown out against the conduct of these privateers, if I did not express the censure of the court at such a proceeding. It would be a mockery of justice not to allow indemnification on so causeless a capture. There is even no one ground to infere that there is a particle of enemy's property. Is not this then, a case of costs and damages? This court would lose the character of a tribunal of the country, not to notice it; and I am clearly of opinion that there has not been a word said in the case, on behalf of the captors to justify the capture.

"It has been thrown out, that the master has given an unfair account. I will lay that out of the case; it still remained an unjust capture. Let us see what the account is given by the master. He says that the pretence for the capture assigned by the officer who boarded the ship was, "That unless the vessel to which he belonged detained her & sent her in, some other vessel would." To be sure, if such a conversation did pass he was a very improper person to be employed in such a business. Whether it was the captain of the privateer or any person it makes no difference. The parties are bound to employ discreet & prudent men. These certainly cannot be a more unjustifiable reason for making a capture, viz. that if he did not do this unjust act some other person would.

He goes on to state, that when this ship was taken possession of, they were ordered to proceed to Plymouth, that endeavours were made by the prize master and men belonging to the privateer to carry her to Plymouth, but the wind being E. S. E. and foul for Plymouth and blowing very hard, the prize master applied to the neutral master for his and his crews assistance to carry her into Plymouth; upon which he told the prize master, that in the state the wind was it could answer no purpose to tear his ship to pieces by endeavouring to get it to Plymouth, and therefore would not assist in carrying her there; but that if he, the prize master would suffer the ship to proceed to Falmouth a port at that time to leeward, he and his crew would assist and conduct her thither, which he certainly was not bound to do, because it was the duty of the prize-master to carry her into port. The neutral master is under no obligation to assist in it; and he declined the assistance, which he considered injurious to his ship and cargo. The prize-master replied, that his orders were to carry her to Plymouth, and that he could not proceed to Falmouth; upon which the neutral master said that he would not be able to get her safe into Plymouth and again advised him to proceed to Falmouth; that he, the neutral master, had no intention of carrying the ship out of England; and that if they made a prize of her, it might as well be at Falmouth as at Plymouth; upon which the prize master told the neutral master that he might take the ship to Falmouth, which he accordingly did. Undoubtedly this is no contradiction at all, as thrown out; but I am told, that if I choose to open the door for affidavits, a secret would be disclosed. I have too much reason for rejecting the sort of affidavits which come from that quarter, containing charges of concealed papers, charges of attempts to rescue, &c. and supported by the most silly affidavits which those attornies and their clerks can transmit. I will admit of no such affidavits; and I shall pronounce that it was an unjustifiable seizure, and that the captors are liable to costs and damages."

THIS DAY's MAILS.

BOSTON, January 1.

In consequence of the numerous failures at Portland, it has been reported, that the banks in that town have stopped payment; but this is far from being the case, as we are authorised by a gentleman who carried a large number of their bills from this town the present week, to state, that the banks paid their bills as promptly as usual, and without the least delay.

A certain man, with an excellent constitution and in a fine state of health, was disposed to make experiments upon himself. He employed a quack, to whose nostrums he soon fell a victim; having only time to leave the following Epitaph, to be transcribed on his Tombstone,

I was well; took physick, and died!

In 1799 we were in perfect national health; we have taken physick—let the present state of the country speak as to the rest.

[Boston Repertory.]

We have long been theorizing on comparative modes of administering our government, in defence of the system of Washington and Adams, and against that of Mr. Jefferson. Experience now comes in with her thundering voice, so demonstratively on our side of the argument, that discussion seems to be now superfluous. We trust that as prosperity made us fools, adversity, brought on by folly will make us wise. [Ibid.]
