

get from us. We should let them have cotton twist and yarn, because it is dread if that men should, by the want of it, be unable to procure bread for their families. Cotton yarn we say they shall have, if they will relax their measures against us. But this is not sufficient for the opposition. The reciprocity must be all on one side. We must make sacrifices to the enemy, however unwilling the enemy may be to make any to us; and thus we should at last be reduced to this situation, that all the inconveniences, the hardships and privations of war would be felt by us, and none by the enemy.

MORE OF GUN BOATS.
From the London Courier of March 1.
We stated yesterday the capture of seven gun boats, by the Clio, sloop.—The French papers have lately been telling us of a new mode of naval attack, which had been devised by the Danes: Several boats or privateers were to make a combined attack upon any of our ships of war—I was to attack upon the bow, another on the quarter, a third was to place herself in such a position, a fourth in another. These seven gun boats tried this new method; the Clio, as we understand let them advance, and when she was in the midst of them, began the old British manoeuvres and took them all.

An agent of Thomas B. Wait and Co. of Portland Maine, is now in this city, with proposals for publishing Blackstone's Commentaries, with the emendations of Christian. The public will recollect that Mr. Wait was a severe sufferer by the fire at Portland, in January last. All his printing materials, printed sheets, and other property, to the amount of 16000 dolls. were consumed.

The citizens of Baltimore have now an opportunity of encouraging the laudable undertaking of an unfortunate and industrious citizen.

FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION,
A History of the Kine Pock.

And for supplying Physicians and others regularly with ACTIVE VACCINE MATTER, until the first of May, eighteen hundred and eleven

By JAMES SMITH, Physician, Chatham-street. CONDITIONS.

I. The History of the Kine Pock, will be published as soon as circumstances will admit. The work shall be as concise as possible; not omitting, however, any information that may be considered either useful to the Inoculator, or interesting to the community.
II. The subscription for each copy will be five dollars, payable on delivery of the work.— Distant Subscribers are requested to nominate, if convenient, any person in this city, who would receive the Work, and forward it without delay.
III. Every subscriber shall be entitled to a free supply of Active Vaccine Matter, at any time until first of May, 1811. It will be transmitted by post to any part of the United States. A charge, however, of five Dollars, will be hereafter made for every Portion of Vaccine Matter put up for the use of any other person than subscribers to this work.
IV. Every subscriber for one copy shall be entitled to one Inoculation every year, for three years from this date, free of any expense. Subscribers for two or more Copies shall be entitled, during the same period, to have inoculated any number of their own children, apprentices and servants, free of all charges.
V. Every necessary attendance will be given to those inoculated at their own houses, if in the city or precincts, or at the Author's Inoculating Room, in Chatham street, as may be most convenient. A regular record will be kept of every Case.

POOR PERSONS of every description, are inoculated and particularly attended to, every Sunday morning, at the inoculating room. Subscribers to this work are earnestly desired to bring forward, to receive the Kine Pock, the Orphan who may be destitute, and the children of any person who may be unable to secure them from Small Pox.

ALTHOUGH the discovery of the KINE POCK has been justly acknowledged to afford us the means of securing ourselves & our children from the Small Pox with little or no inconvenience whatever; & although it has been introduced and spread amongst us with as much industry, and on terms as favorable as could be wished—yet how much is it to be regretted, that every day seems to lessen its importance, or add greatly to our negligence in using it! For a little while, indeed, we were all enthusiasts in adopting the new Inoculation, and we expelled the Small Pox from our city. But already the public seem to have become wearied with obtaining so great a benefit, on terms so easy and so simple; and at this time we can scarcely find a family but has one or more of its members liable to take the Small Pox, if chance should bring again its contagion to their door.

To preserve a constant supply of Vaccine Infection, so that it may at any time be procured from some well known source, has been always considered to be an object of the first importance to the community. It is now well known that it is scarcely possible for physicians in the country, to keep a supply of active vaccine matter for themselves, without experiencing frequent and troublesome interruptions; and hitherto they have annually lost it: depending solely for a fresh supply from this or some other populous city, where it is more practicable to keep it alive. No one here, except the Author of these Proposals, has as yet taken upon himself the trouble of preserving this invaluable Remedy; and it has been lost every summer by every other Physician in this City; and has been renewed again every winter and spring, by a fresh distribution from his little stock. For the last Summer past, however, he could not have performed a sufficient number of Inoculations to have kept the Kine Pock in existence among us, had he not often times solicited as a personal favour, the liberty of communicating it, without any charge whatever, for the benefit conferred. At this time he finds great difficulty in procuring as many patients as are necessary to give the matter demanded of him, for the use of those Inoculators who now require the annual supply of this invaluable remedy.

From the particular attention which he has been led to bestow upon this subject, and the new and important improvements which he has himself, as well in preserving the Vaccine Virus, as in applying it in a more safe and easy manner than had been before practised by any of his acquaintance. He however, considers Vaccination as still in its infancy, and has no doubt but that many other or greater improvements may be made, if Inoculators would but at the trouble of noticing the very many various circumstances which daily present themselves in this new and astonishing Disease, and he hopes that a more perfect knowledge of the Kine Pock may yet perhaps, point out to us the true nature of every case, on which afflicts the human race.

It is therefore conceived to be a duty incumbent on him to continue his earnest attention to the subject for a few years longer; and he flatters himself, that by offering a regular supply of genuine vaccine matter, and in endeavoring to diffuse a more accurate knowledge of the Kine Pock, he will promote its more general extension among his fellow citizens; and that by removing their prejudices, he will stimulate them to perform an important duty which they owe to themselves, their children, apprentices, servants and neighbours. His intentions, however, to serve the public, are not to be disappointed, it must be observed, he has undertaken the very laborious task (however laborious it may be to himself) of carrying the Practice hand in hand with the Theory, so that if his Book should not have sufficient merit, his Work shall make up for all deficiencies.
