APOLLO'S FOUNT.

THE GAMES OF LIFE.

The little Miss at three years old,
Plays with her doll and prattles;
The little Master stout and bold,
Plays with his drum and rattles.

The Boy detesting musty books,
Loves romping with the lasses,
And Miss grows older, studies looks,
And plays with looking-glasses.

The jolly Toper fond of fun,
Plays with his friend at drinking;
The Sportsman plays with dog and gun,
And Wise Men play at thinking.

The Beauty, full of haughty airs,
When young, plays at tormenting;
But wrinkled turned to other cares,
And sports at last repenting.

Wretched from self-created woe,
The Miser's game is hoarding;
But wrinkled turned to other cares,
The Sailor plays at boarding.

The Lawyer plays his game so well,
As gets him many a greeting;
The Auctioneer with things to sell,
The Glutton plays at eating.

To play at dosing Doctors know,
A lengthy case is cheering!
And those who would to Congress go
Play at electioneering.

With ledger busied Merchants take
A game at Calculation;
And Congressmen too often make
A play-thing of the nation.

By speaking much, and doing nought,
By bustling, threat'ning, raving,
Congress the nation have not taught,
That they have played at saving.

With looks profound and thoughtful mind,
Projectors play at scheming,
Till worn with care, at last they find
They've all along been dreaming.

The Lover sad, and woeful wan,
Plays day and night at fretting;
Whilst laughing at the silly man,
His Delia sports coquetting.

Cowards, while none but cowards nigh,
Are fond of gasconading;
And Statesmen fawn, and cringe, and lie,
And play at Masquerading.

* * * * * * * * * * *

At setting types the Printers play,
And some times with their quills,
Their Patrons do not play, they say,
At paying off their bills.

The Player plays for wealth and fame,
And thus all play together,
Till Death at last disturbs the game,
And stops their play forever.

FROM THE CATSKILL RECORDER.

THE THUNDER PROOF CASTLE.

Some forty years ago, the first frame house was raised in a pleasant little town on the Connecticut, by a Mr. Flint, who with his newly wedded partner, began their fortunes in it, with as fair prospects of happiness, perhaps as any family in all New-Hampshire. Mr. and Mrs. Flint were not of that class who find solid enjoyment alone in the depths of science, nor of that order, who see happiness only in the round of affluence. They were both illiterate and poor. The ideal happiness, not only of individuals but of families, and even great nations, is often overthrown by a single breath of wind.—So it fared with the Flint family. They had not inhabited their new dwelling quite a year when an incident, very trifling in itself, threw a gloom over their lives, and transformed a smiling couple into the melancholy devotees of sorrow.

It was a pleasant day in the month of June, and the family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Flint, a hired laborer, and a servant girl, were on the point of sitting down to dinner, when a rap was heard at the door. At the customary answer, "walk in," the door opened and a hideously deformed old woman made her appearance, and seated herself.—The novelty of a fortune-teller unluckily drew an unguarded expression from the wife, while at table, at which it is presumed the old Sybil was secretly offended; and it may be seen in the sequel, that it proved a fruitful source of trouble to the family for many years.

Dinner being ended, and an opportunity being offered to consult their oracle, they by turns, passed the examination of the fortune-teller, and received their future destinies from her lips; but as none of them have any bearing upon our story but Mrs. Flint's we will not presume to unfold the role of fate, farther than our present purpose demands.

"In less than one year," said the old hag, "you will give birth to a son. He will be a very bright and promising child, and when he is 18 years 5 months and 8 days old he will be killed by Lightning." The year rolled round and brought with it the promised son. But it did not bring with it the joy that usually accompanies such a boon. From the day of his birth, Henry Flint, (for so he was named) was nursed with many an anxious sigh, and was the subject of many a direful dream. Had any accident befallen him, or had he been of a dull sterile mind the credit of the prediction would have lost ground, and his parents might then have rested in peace. But it was not so. He was of a quick and penetrative genius, and discovered very early stability of judgment, far above his age; he was always healthy, cheerful, and fortunate, and these circumstances, which ought to awake the gratitude of parents, only made his more wretched, as they seemed so completely to accord with the augury of the old fortune-teller. Henry was placed at a Grammar school and no pains were spared to fit him for the sacred desk; a place to which his early piety and natural capacity seemed to destine him. By his persevering activity, he found out the cause of the melancholy that hung over his parents' enjoyments; but he manifested a total disregard of such predictions, which his better judgment and education had taught him to despise. He strove with all his ingenuity to convert them to reason, and omitted no opportunity to bring the invention of such Gypsies into ridicule.—But the day was fast approaching; and he had already entered his nineteenth year without any other fruits of his labours, than a deeper and more constant gloom on the minds of farmer Flint and his wife. Having found fruitless all his attempts to bring the bugbear from their imaginations, he desisted, with a firm determination to think no more about it. Many were the counsils & consultations at farmer Flint's cottage, to devise ways means to ward off the buts of fate. It was at last determined to build a retreat or castle if we may so call it, which should be proof against the destructive element, and on the fast day, to lead him into it for his safety.—This was to be built, without regard to expense, of such materials, as had been proved by observation to escape the effects of lightning, and on the lowest spot of ground near the cottage. And Henry had so far consented to this plan as to let them go on without ridicule, for hitherto he had ridiculed every foolish whim as far as decency to his parents would allow.

The trying day as last came.—Mr. Flint's family arose, after a sleepless night, and found the morning unusually fine and pleasant.—To avoid being laughed at, they said very little of the expected disaster, and dinner came, without a single sign of war in the elements. The mother smiled at table, perhaps the first time for weeks; and they all now began to entertain doubts of the veracity of fortune-tellers; but they dare not express, or hardly silently cherish a hope that the day would be sorrowless.—The workmen had returned to the meadow, the clock had struck three, and madam Flint had become almost sociable, when the unwelcome roll of thunder was heard echoing over the distant hills; a few dark clouds had united, and by their frowning and growling, threatened a tremendous shower. The father came in, sat down, but said not a word.—Every countenance was dark, as if it had became a mirror to the darkning skies. Henry alone was undaunted; his countenance was like an angel, or any being that fears not death. His sister, united with their mother, and with all the entreaties they were capable of framing, besought him to fly to the Castle for safety. But he was now fixed in his resolution not to stir a step.

The storm was now drawing near very fast, the lightning became more vivid every gleam, and the increasing roar of thunder was mingled with the rushing sound of rain in the distant forest, when the amiable youth took his bible in hand and walked straight into the open field.—The distressed souls in the cottage hardly knew where they were, until the thunder came so frequently and loud, that they began to tremble for their own safety.—"Why did we not go into the thunder house," said little Sophia, as pale as death, "the thunder will strike the house and——" she did not finish the sentence, for a tremendous volume of thunder filled the room, apparently with liquid fire, and seemed to sunder the very foundation of the earth by its report.

The storm had spent its force, and the rain ceased almost instantly. The sun broke out, and all nature by her smiles, seemed willing to atone for her recent frowns, and the thunder died away like an evening echo, through the surrounding forest. The despairing group in the house were rivetted to their seats in a suspence—no one daring to stir, for fear of being the first to behold the corps of the dear Henry.—They sat fearfully gazing at each other till Henry opened the door, saying with a smile, "your thunder-proof castle is a fine defence; the lightning has dashed it to atoms." They all ran to see, and it was so. Farmer Flint turned on his heel and went to his work. He was never known to say a word of it afterwards, unless prompted to it; and the whole family, Henry excepted, although they were too well bred to be angry, never heard with satisfaction or complacency the name of the "thunder-proof castle."

P. CANFIELD.

RETURNS his sincere acknowledgements to his friends and the public for the liberal patronage he received in the UNIVERSITY LOTTERY, Third Class, NEW SERIES, and respectfully solicits a continuance of it in the FOURTH CLASS, the scheme of which he has now the honor of offering to them and the public.—This Lottery is also formed upon pure mathematical principles, as was the third class, and he hopes and trusts that all are so perfectly satisfied with the correctness of this mode, that it will meet with all that attention from adventurers which it merits; he fearlessly, but with due deference, invites all to a scrutiny of the scheme, certain of its pleasing them by the small number and low price of tickets therein, the rapidity of the drawing, and the very short period to elapse before its determination. Larger and more brilliant schemes on this plan will be adopted as the demand for tickets in this kind of lottery shall increase.

NEW SADDLERY.

JOHN G. STEVENS, respectfully informs his customers & the public generally that he has just received from Philadelphia and is now opening, at his stand, nearly opposite the court house, a general assortment of

NEW SADDLERY.

This, with his present stock on hand, will make his assortment very complete. He intends to keep on hand a constant supply of Saddles, Bridles, Harness, Trunks of every description, or manufacture them in the best manner and at the shortest notice. He flatters himself from his experience in business, and with the assistance of good workmen, added to the manner which he has purchased his materials, he will be enabled to give general satisfaction, and sell as low as they can be had elsewhere for cash.

N. B. He also has an assortment of chair, gig, and switch whips, spurs, horse brushes, combs, &c. He also has a GIG, made by Messrs. Camper and Thompson, that he will sell for paper, or at a reduced price for cash. J. G. S.

THE UNION TAVERN.

The subscriber having removed from Delaware and taken a permanent lease of this Establishment, situate in Easton, Maryland, at the Sign of the EAGLE, opposite the Farmers' Bank, and Post-Office. Is now prepared to give entertainment therein to all travellers and citizens, who may favour him with a call. From his long experience in the business of Inn-Keeper; and his own habits of personal attention, and those of his family, he can assure the public of the best accommodation in his House; his establishment has undergone a thorough repair; and if cleanliness, good living and moderate bills can attract the waried traveller and country gentleman, whose business call them often to Town, the subscriber flatters himself with the hope of very soon obtaining a full share of patronage. As a stranger he asks only a call, and a fair trial of his house.

REGISTER OF DEBATES IN CONGRESS.

PROSPECTUS.

ACCORDING to an intimation heretofore given, there will be published at the office of the National Intelligencer, during the next session of Congress, and, if encouraged by the approbation of the Public, at every session thereafter, a REGISTER OF DEBATES IN CONGRESS, intended to comprehend a more full Report of the Speeches on topics of general interest, in each House of Congress, than has ever heretofore been published, or than can be given to the Public through the ordinary and limited channel, the columns of a newspaper. This compilation will be of the most authentic cast, printed with great regard to accuracy, and in a form for durable preservation.

This undertaking is not of course intended to substitute or supersede the Reports of Debates for the National Intelligencer, but rather by withdrawing the heavy and extended Reports from its columns, to enable the proprietors of that Journal to furnish, every day, in a comprehensive form, intelligible Reports of the Proceedings and Discussions on the day preceding, in both Houses.

The "REGISTER" is necessarily an experiment, but it is an experiment the success of which we see no reason to doubt. Every one who takes an interest in our political history, as well as all those who engage in the duties of political life, must have felt and lamented the want of a record of Debates in Congress, in a convenient form, with indexes which might lead the inquirer to any subject debated, and to the name of any one who engaged in debate. Such a work would be an elementary book for young politicians, and we have no hesitation in asserting that the possession of such a one, from the commencement of the existing government to this day, would be of immense value to the nation, were it only to show what has heretofore been said upon questions which are continually recurring for discussion, and producing needless consumption of time by superfluous debate. What is true of the years that have past, will, as soon as they are gone, be equally true of those in which we live.

It is not only, therefore, as a vehicle of present information, but also as a book for future reference—as a National Political Repository and Text-Book, that we hope this work will be both useful and popular.

From the lowness of the subscription to the work, it will be seen that it is no part of our calculation to realize any present profit from it. On the contrary, we shall, in all probability, lose money by it for a year or two, hoping that thereafter its established character will ensure it a sufficient patronage to make it profitable.

GALES & SEATON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1824.

CONDITIONS.

THE publication of GALES & SEATON'S REGISTER OF DEBATES IN CONGRESS will commence as the Debates of each successive Session of Congress shall afford materials to fill a half sheet, (8 pages)

The work will be printed in the octavo form, on a superior royal paper, made for the purpose, and on a brevier type, in double columns—each page comprising nearly as much matter as one of the columns of the National Intelligencer.

It will contain as full and accurate Reports as can be obtained on all Debates on main questions, and of all interesting Debates on incidental questions; with an Appendix, containing a list of the Members of each House, the yeas and nays in each House on questions which have been the subject of Debate, such Documents, connected with the subjects of Debate, as may be deemed essential to enable the reader to comprehend them, and proper indexes to the whole.

The Debates of the next Session, it is computed, will, with the Appendix, make a volume of five hundred pages, at least, and will be furnished to subscribers, through the Post Office, in sheets, as published, (or reserved at this Office, at the subscriber's option,) at THREE DOLLARS for the volume, be it more or less, to be paid in advance in all cases of transmission beyond the limits of the city. The sheets will be transmitted as completed, without regard to any particular days, as the publication must of course be regulated by the preparation of the matter of which it is to be composed.

The subscription will in no case, unless within the city, and not then unless specially indicated, be understood to extend beyond the volume actually paid for in advance.

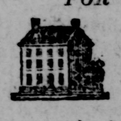

To non-subscribers the price will be FOUR dollars, bound in boards, for the volume now announced.

The Debates of the Session of Congress following the next, and of the first Session of every Congress, will, it is supposed, fill about one thousand pages, or perhaps more, making one very large volume, or two of a handsome size—the first Session of each Congress being nearly double the duration of the second. The price of the Register for the FIRST Session of each Congress, be its contents more or less than 1000 pages, will be fixed at FIVE dollars to subscribers, and six to non-subscribers.

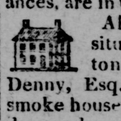

☞ Subscriptions received at the Star office.
