

to any other person; There not a medical since his death; from the time of our marriage till his death we always lived there in this city; for about six months after our marriage we lived at No. 9 Morrison's Alley then we moved to No. 1126 Chestnut Alley and lived four months and then moved to where I now live; my husband, the soldier, left me about Jan., 1889 and didn't live with me for about two months, but he came to see me occasionally; during the time he was away from me he lived with the daughter of Susan Gray, at No.
414 Elm Lane, this city; he died at her house, but didn't live there then, he was back home living with me, but went there that evening to get a letter that he heard and then for him and while there he died of what the doctors (Dr. Benson) called heart disease; they held an inquest; for the time I married him he always complained of shortness of breath, pain in left side and limbs, diarrhea and rheumatism, affecting his left side, mostly and back; Dr.
Benson (didn't know person who wrote) in
