

Yes Sir, he bought the house Division Street (1309) and I loaned him $800⁰⁰ which was the cash he had to pay down, and then he kept on paying into the Building Society until he owned it - No Sir, he never paid me that money back, or any part of it. He was a joiner and also looked after furnaces in winter, but only made enough to keep things about even.

When Mr Rosier died the house was sold at a great sacrifice, and after expenses were paid I got about $600⁰⁰. That is all I got.

No, Sir, my daughter has no income whatever, except what she earns by washing and ironing and I am so feeble I can't help much.

My daughter was never divorced, never separated from him, lived with him to the day of his death.

Of course I can't swear of my own knowledge, but I am sure Mr Rosier was not married before he married my daughter, because he was very young when he went into the army, and I knew his grandmother & mother, both dead now, and they never said or thought such a thing.

I have understood your questions, have heard you read my deposition and my answers are correctly recorded.
