

er the soldier was married or not in wartime, and after the war, about 25 or 30 years ago, he saw him living with a woman on Druid Hill Avenue, Baltimore, but he does not know her name or what became of her; that he does not know how many wives the soldier had, if any; that he does not know Margaret Burnett, or that a woman of that name was placed in the insane asylum; that he knows nothing whatever as to whether the soldier was divorced from her, and that all that part of his affidavit about Margaret Burnett and George Chambers' marriage or divorce was put in by the writer of the affidavit. The special examiner was unable to find the witness William H. Jackson.

Each of the affidavits above referred to purport execution on February 16, 1910, before Peter Sahn, a justice of the peace of Baltimore, Md., and each of them was prepared by the same person, as evidenced by the handwriting in the body of the papers, but the identity of the scrivener is unknown.

The special examiner was likewise unable to see Ida Chambers, the alleged committee who is probably in Atlantic City, N. J.
