

Summary

William Jolly of Vienna, Mo., aged 50 and a farmer alleges that he worked with the deceased soldier prior to the war and has him just before he left, and that he was in good health, and that he had been married and had lost his wife who left two boys and two girls.

Thomas Bergin of Vienna, Mo., aged 69 and a merchant alleges that he knew the deceased soldier from 1830 and has him often before the war and considered him a healthy man, and that he thinks that he was single.

Harriet Hughes of Vienna, Mo., aged 60 alleges that she knew the deceased soldier from before the and has him often with her