

Have seen the Claimant off and on, ^{year} ~~each~~ since he was discharged. Probably two or three times each year and have heard him complain of pain in the wounded leg. So not recall that made complaint of any other trouble.

I have previously testified in the Claimant's Affidavit exhibited and acknowledged. And the statements as contained therein are correct. "I ~~did~~ had forgotten about it, or rather I did not remember until I heard you read my affidavit." At the time I made the affidavit my memory was refreshed by ~~have~~ talking matters over with the Claimant.

I now recollect that his eye (left) was sore while in service - do not know what caused it. If I recollect right, and I think I do, there was something the matter with the eye when he joined the Company "had something like a Pterygium or speck in the eye."

I was promoted to fifth Sergeant after I had been in the Company about six months. I was on the transport that took us from Roanoke Island to Norfolk, Va. and distinctly recollect that there was a row on board. Among members of one of the other Companies of the regiment. Claimant was not engaged in it. I am sure. Am not related or interested.
