

members of my Company got into a fight. Douglass threw his bayonet at Williams. it missed him and struck Clamant in his right leg. Clamant. I understood was sitting on his knapsack at the time and was taking no part in the fracas. I was at the other end of the boat at the time and did not see him when he was wounded but saw him shortly after - saw the men standing about him - and saw some one bandaging up the wound. I saw and talked with Douglass (now dead) - and he told me that Clamant was an innocent party and he, Douglass did not intend to hit him. I do not know whether Clamant was treated by the Surgeon at the time. I have seen Clamant right smart since we were discharged and I have often heard him complain of his leg hurting him. Says the leg is failing him - and has limped in that leg ever since he was wounded. Cannot state how much the leg has disabled him since discharge. Am not related or interested. Questions understood. Answers correctly needed. I do not know where Crusade Williams is. Douglass died in this City - about two years ago.

H. W. Hall
T. E. S. Comy

His
William X Williams
Deponent.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 4 day of September, 1890, and I certify that the contents were fully made known to deponent before signing.

H. W. Hall
Special Examiner.