

Middle Street, cor. Argyle Avenue,
Baltimore, Md.

Known her, though drawing a pension from the government, has never given her any support. For a long time the St Vincent de Paul's Society aided her. Her children with the exception of one son who has done as well as he could, under present conditions, have done nothing at all.

This son is crippled and unable to do much, & has been her principal support. She has seen many a rough day and experienced the pangs of cold & hunger.

I recommend her therefore as worthy of any charity or aid that may be shown, and I trust that her husband may be compelled by law to give a certain share for her support. I shall gladly give any further particulars that may be required.
