QUOTATION OF THE WEEK

The world, like an ore-bearing mountain, is veined with every possible kind of significance. We are all miners and quarrymen, tunneling, cutting, extracting. An artist is a man equipped with better tools than those of common men.—Aldous Huxley.

WORLD AIR CENTER

Baltimore, the metropolis of Maryland, is to be congratulated on the very evident possibility of its becoming one of the world's centers of air transportation, due to its selection by the Pan-American Airways as its terminal for trans-Atlantic passenger service.

The establishment of this terminal at Baltimore by Pan-American is destined to be of far-reaching significance and all of Maryland will follow in the wake of Baltimore's good fortune.

Pan-American alone, through its own air fleets and its working agreements with Old World companies, circles the globe. Other companies such as Transcontinental and Western and the United Airlines indicated that they may become iterested in a Baltimore site once Pan-American made public its decision.

With these companies working out of Baltimore the entire air map of the United States will change and will radiate from Baltimore as the hub on the eastern seaboard.

Air transportation, still in its infancy, holds the key of the future. The entire international scene will shift as growing airlines revise their charts.

Queen Anne's county, almost across the Chesapeake Bay from Baltimore, is especially interested in the reasons which prompted the choice of Baltimore as an air base. Most of them apply here as well.

In the past decade a number of newcomers have bought estates in Queen Anne's and are laying a foundation for future county progress. In a great number of cases these newcomers first saw Queen Anne's from the air and were attracted by its flying and landing possibilities. Its flat fields and numerous waterways offer landing facilities for any type of plane.

Baltimore's climatic foundations for the past fifty years were thoroughly examined. The number of foggy days and the number of days when its waters were free from ice were computed, the latter being a vital matter for flying boats.

Its nearness to Washington may have had a bearing. More telling was the presence of some 40,000,000 people within a 200 mile radius.

The great arm of the Chesapeake Bay played a part. For the most part the trans-Atlantic planes flying in and out of Baltimore will not cross Queen Anne's. They will drop down from New York to Baltimore, or course the length of the Bay on their way to Bermuda. The Chesapeake offers a hundred miles or more of flight over inland water, instead of ocean flying for the West Indies trip.

All these matters are significant to Baltimore. They are also significant to the growing number of air minded residents of Queen Anne's. And as Baltimore leads the way for the entire state of Maryland in the coming picture of air travel, Queen Anne's will be the first to follow along.

WHOSE NAME NEXT

The past summer was one of the worst on record in the matter of automobile accidents and deaths.

And the most dangerous driving months are still to come—the months of rain and ice, and few daylight hours.

Every season sees better, more scientifically designed highways—and yet accidents grow worse, both in number and severity. Every year sees stronger, more easily controlled, and mechanically safer cars—yet the carnage grows.

It is true that a percentage of accidents can be directly attributed to mechanical failure of automobiles, or to road conditions. This percentage marks but a very small part of the total of crashes. The human element is responsible, and alone responsible, for the great majority of accidents, minor or major.

Worst menace of all is the driver who attempts to push the throttle through the floorboard—who opreates his car at excessive speeds. And excessive speed is a flexible term—there are times when fifty is safe, and fifteen too fast.

Then there are the drivers who pass on hills and curves, who hog the centerline, who allow their car to wander to the wrong side of the road—and drivers who committ a thousand and one driving errors that may save a minute, and may also send themselves and others into eternity.

You see many headlines like: "Five Killed When Cars Collide." You read the names of the victims, go on to other articles and forgot all aout them. Next time you see such a headline just reflect that your name, or the name of a friend or loved one, may be in the next similar list of corpses. Then it won't be so easy to forget.

TIME FOR ACTION

It's time we took taxation out of politics.

A national election is just over. It will be four more years before we stage the great quadrennial show again. But in the meantime, no matter who sits in the White House, no matter who are members of the House and Senate, taxes are going to hit us all.

Republicans pay taxes. Democrats pay taxes. So do Socialists and Communists. And no political party has a clear record on tax leglislation. Spokesmen for all parties have long promised tax reduction—and then, once they took office, proceeded to raise taxes. Members of all parties have done their part to fasten a leech-like bureaucracy upon us— and you can't have bureaucratic government and efficient, economical government at the same time.

During the campaign, we heard more promises of tax reductions from all political quarters. Now the time for conversation is past, and the time for action has arrived. Promises demand fulfillment—pledges cry out to be redeemed. Unless we are to be utterly crushed under a tax burden that is already sapping more than 20 per cent of the national income, the American people must demand that statemanship take the place of politics, and that a sincere effort really to reduce the cost of government be made.

POWER OF THE PRESS

A veteran correspondent in America for one of the most said newspapers of Great Britain ventured the opinion a day or two before election that the press of the United States, or rather a major section of it, had lost materially in prestige during the campaign. As a detached observer he believed the majority of the newspapers were not in step with the sympathies of a majority of the people.

As a political forecaster he proved correct; whether the press has suffered in influence as a result of sticking to its views or those of its publishers must be measured as events go on. There is no denying that large masses of people in numerous industrial centers or agricultural areas felt themselves largely inarticulate so far as expression of their feelings in the local press was concerned.

Though the result of the balloting indicates that editorial advice was very little accepted, it is nevertheless significant that American readers generally do trust the informational service of newspapers as furnishing data from which to draw their conclusions. In the main this trust is justified.

It is significant, too, that the United States has newspapers free to speak their opinions, to criticize, to sound their warnings and to air more than one side of the political case. This is their function. Like the coiner of the saying, "Let me write a nation's songs and I care not who writes its laws," Jefferson was doubtless exaggerating when he said, "I would rather live in a country with newspapers and without a government, than in a country with a government but without newspapers." Yet the service of information and discussion is vital to enlightenment, and the press has a duty as well as a privilege in making that service as full and fair as possible.—Christian Science Monitor.

The children of 'trailer families" have become a school problem in California—Editorial. The solution is simple: Broadcast the lessons. Can't you picture the little dears listening to their history lesson over the radio, the while they study geography by looking out the window.—St. Louis Star-Times.

It is said there are 2700 hidden taxes in this country, which partly explains why there's nowhere left for the taxpayer to hide.—Worcester Gazette.

Let us be of good cheer, remembering that the misfortunes hardest to bear are those which neve rhappen. —Lowell.

THE Rambling Recorder

The combination of the steady drizzle and cool weather Sunday was enough to keep most folks indoors enjoying the welcome warmth of fires. To that extent it was a foretaste of the winter months when reading, chatting and other indoor sports take the place of summer fun.

—o—

The rain also helped to give the landscape a proper autumnal tone. Leaves which had turned yellow or bronze last week floated down in a steady drift all day. The moisture was well received by farmers. Land was beginning to get a little dry. And for those who were in the midst of corn husking the soaking made husking easier.

—o—

Mrs. A. V. White, daughter of Mrs. R. E. Leary of Pondtown, who is visiting in Phoenix, Arizona, is sure to be remembered by her friends in Queen Anne's county. A number of them have received token of one sort of another, usually significant of Arizona, from Mrs. White. Among the latest reported were a box with four cactus plants sent to Mrs. Dewey Price, a package of fresh Arizona dates to Mrs. W. E. Higdon and a 12-inch jointed rubber doll to little Winnie Mae Jester. Mrs. Earle gets an air mail letter twice weekly.

—o—

Strange how people are more interested in errors than in exactness. A few months ago almost every one had some comment about the misspelling of "cemetery" on the two bronze markers placed on the Town Office building in Centreville. Quite a few even consulted a dictionary so they could be sure they were right in saying the signs were wrong. Recently the Town Commissioners had new markers with the correct spelling of "cemetery" affixed to the walls and it didn't create a ripple.

—o—

When it comes to sheriffs the Everett family can furnish them. The newly elected sheriff of Kent county, Delaware, where Dover is situated, is Levi Everett, nephew of Sheriff T. Herbert Everett of Queen Anne's. Incidentally, Levi Everett was almost born a Marylander. His father's farm straddled the state line with part of the land in Queen Anne's county. The farm home, however, is on the De'aware side. Queen Anne's had a Sheriff Everett once befor when D. Hawkins Everett filled the office.

—o—

Hunting licenses are like automobile tags: people put off getting them until the rabbit season pops right up. Each year about 1,200 licenses are issued in Queen Anne's. On Tuesday the total taken out was 558, which is about normal, yet the force in the office of Clerk of Court William H. Carter expect the usual rush on Friday and Saturday to swell it to the 1,000 mark at least.

—o—

Seems as though the liquor salesmen heard there was an election in Queen Anne's. Bright and early Tuesday morning one or two liquor salesfolk were on hand, just in case the County Commissioners were ready to do business.

—o—

Terms of the Circuit Court certainly cool off wrongdoing. This week the docket in Police Court was almost entirely made up of traffic violations.

—o—

Men in any business or trade are quick to notice sloppy work done by others in their line. Bill Dean, one of the printers at the Record and Observer, had three new dollar bills this week on which the engravings on the back and front were so badly out of line with each other that a private shop would not think of letting them out as a sample of its workmanship. The green sides were clipped right at the top without a border. But Bill should worry. They are still worth a hundred cents at the stores.

—o—

There was a time not so long ago when radio stations permitted no visitors in a studio during broadcasting and imposed rigid silence upon necessary employees. A sneeze or a cough would have thrown an announcer into fits. Times have changed with better microphones. When Mrs. Algernon Carter broadcast over WMAL on a national hookup last week her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Dudley, and Miss Isabel Bewick were in the studio. While Mrs. Carter was talking one musician calmly tinkled the piano keys to get the swing of his next number. And no one batted an eye. Incidentally, several Queen Anne's countians who listened in said that Mrs. Carter's voice came over as naturally as if she were in the room with them.

—o—

John Massey, one of the newer Boy Scouts, is in earnest about the organization. Last week he entered the Centreville National Bank and timidly inquired if he could start a bank account with a dime. He was told that he could. As a brand new pass book was being made out he was asked casually what he was saving for and he said he was raising a dollar for the Boy Scouts.

Two-thirds of the country's population a century hence will be descended from rural people while less than one-third will be descended from families now living in cities and towns of more than 2,500 if present birth rates continue. Such is the estimate of Dr. O. E. Baker of the Department of Agriculture.

Political speaker: "I'm pleased to see such a dense crowd here tonight."

Voice from the rear: "Don't be too much pleased. We're not all dense." —Wall Street Journal.

The Good Old Days

Reminder of a day when the Hon. Emerson C. Harrington was on his way up in the political world, as reprinted from the old Cambridge News:

—o—

By the unofficial returns Hon. Emerson C. Harrington, candidate for the county for Comptroller, received a popular majority throughout the State of about 19,000. He carried every county on the Eastern Shore, except Cecil, the home of his opponent, by large pluralities. Dorchester gave him a nice majority of 1580—the largest majority received by a local candidate. He will have over 100 votes in the convention, while his opponent will have about

He not only carried all the counties and precincts in Baltimore city, which went for Gorman, but also carried many counties which are in the Lee column, thus showing his popularity throughout the State.

The number is approximately the same as a year ago. No non-resident licenses for either the full year or the five-day type have been issued.

In the Circuit Court for Queen Anne's County, In Equity.

Cause No. 3105

The object of this suit is to procure a Divorce a Vinculo Matrimonii by the said Mary B. Dorman sometimes called Mary B. Torman from her husband Herman B. Dorman sometimes called Herman B. Torman.

The bill states that they were married on the second day of June, 1917; that they lived together as man and wife until 1922; that the defendant drove the plaintiff from his home and broke up same; that the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband was always kind, affectionate and above reproach; that without just cause the defendant broke up the home and left the plaintiff and abandoned her, which abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years and is deliberate and final and beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that two children were born of this marriage and they have been in the custody of the plaintiff since the separation; that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland; that the plaintiff has lived in the State of Maryland since 1922. It is thereupon this 11th day of November, in the year nineteen hundred and thirty six Ordered by the Circuit Court for Queen Anne's County, in Equity, that the Plaintiff, by causing a copy of this Order to be inserted in some newspaper printed and published in said Queen Anne's County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of December, 1936, give notice to the said Defendant of the object and substance of this Bill of Complaint and warning him to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before the 29th day of December, 1936, to show cause if any he has, why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.
