Let us have the best.—An eastern farmer went to a clergyman, and inquired of him, "why he did not preach as much Latin and Greek as the minister who preached to them previous to him?"—"Why," said he, "I thought I would make use of such language as I presumed you could understand, and I did not suppose that the farmers generally understood Latin and Greek."—"Oh," said the farmer, "I pay for the best, and let us have it, give us asmuch Latin and Greek as you can spare."

Mistaking A Customer.—Last June, a young buck of the city, was journeying through Worcester county,Mass.and endeavoured to show himself off by quizzing the farmers. He was passing a field of corn, which a boy was hoeing. The season had been cold and backward, and the corn looked yellow. The young dandy stuck his head out of the stage and bawled out "Boy, whatmakes your corn look so yellow?" The boy raised up his head and bawled out in return, 'Why, we planted yaller corn, you darned fool you!"

A PERILOUS SITUATION.

A correspondent of the Rochester Observer, relates the following account of a wonderful escape from almost certain destruction:

Mr. Editor:—I had just arrived at the Falls of Niagara, on Monday, of last week, when a canal boat was discovered to be floating down in the centre of the river probably two miles above the cataract. It was soon discovered that there were persons on board, who gave evidence of distress and alarm. The facts, as obtained by the writer from two of the persons on board, were very nearly as follows:

The boat belonged to the Welland Canal and recovered freight from the Canada Shore, two or three miles above the falls, and was towed up by a horse on the shore, the master of the boat Capt. Coon,was sick on board and entirely unable to take charge of her. The management was entrusted to another man, a boy of seventeen years old and a young woman of the same age. From some deficiency in attaching the tow rope to the horse, it gave waywhen the boat wasabout three miles above the falls. They soon discovered that they were not only floating fast from the shore, but rapidly downwards. They could not reach bottom with the setting poles,and had nomeans of making a successful effort to reach the shore. Consternation seized the crew, as they saw on the one hand the American shore at the distance of two miles, and on the other the Canada shore at the distance of one mile, fast receding, and a mile and a half below they saw rising the smoke of the dreadful cataract, which they of one accord had now concluded would form their common grave.

All was excitement,—nothing was done nor could be done, with hopes of success, till at last the man, the only efficient hand in the management of the boat, concluded to make one exertion to save himself—plunged overboard and swam for the Canada shore, 1 mile distant,taking a diagonal course downwards hoping to land above the falls. Hewas discovered from the shore and at the great risk of the discoverer was taken from the river just at the breaking of the water. After he left the boat, the boy and the young woman concluded to make one more effort, which they did by raising a sail hoping that the almost imperceptible breeze might float them so far towards the American shore, as to land them on Goat Island.—Their mast consisted of their setting pole set into the stove pipe, to which they attached blankets for sails. They floated so far towards the American shore that they were taken from the boat by 6 men,who ventured in a small boat to their relief, although they were so near the falls that the water had become very rough. The boat passed on the American side of Goat Island and lodged on the rocks, in the rapids, just above the falls,where it remained when the writer left, on Wednesday.

The whole circumstances as related by the young man, are most deeply interesting and affecting, and although too deeply affected when he told the story the next day to give a connected chain of the event, yet he manifested during the transaction, a presence of mind in erecting sails, closing windows,&c which would have been creditable to riper years, and no doubt saved them from the destruction that awaited them below.

The boat had a horse on board which they forced overboard during the time of their greatest peril, hoping he would reach the Canada shore but the poor animal made his grave in the vortex below.

From the Pittsburgh Advertiser,

THE WORK GOES BRAVELY ON.

The news from Ohio is highly important. Gov. M'Arthur has declined standing a poll for re-election, and the National Republicans and anti-masons are to unite upon D. Lyman, Esq. for that office.—The same parties will also unite upon the CLAY ELECTORAL TICKET. This will give Ohio to Clay by a majority of 10,000. There are changes enough in Hamilton county alone to sink Jackson's majority of 1828.

RELIGION.—We pity the man who has no religion inhis heart, no high and irresistible yearning after a better and holier existence, who is contented with the sensuality and grossness of earth—whose spirit never revolts at the darkness of its prison-house, nor exults at the thought of its final emancipation. We pity him,for he affords no evidence of its origin, no manifestation of that intellectual prerogative, which renders him the delegated lord of the visible creation. He can rank no higher than animal nature—the spiritual could never stoop so lowly. To seek for beastly excitements—to minister with a bountiful hand to depraved and strong appetites—are attributes of the animal alone. To limit our hopes and aspirations to this world, is like remaining for ever in the place of our birth—without ever lifting the veil of the visible horizon which bent over infancy.

There is religion in every thing around us, a calm and holy religion in the unbreathing things of nature,which man would do well to imitate. It is a meek and blessed influence, stealing in, as it were unawares, upon the heart. It comes quietly and without excitement. It has no terror—no gloom in its approaches, It does not rouse the passions; it is untrammelled by the creeds, and unshadowed by the superstitions of man. It is fresh from the hands of its author; and glowing from the immediate presence of the Great Spirit, which pervades and quickens it. It is written on the arched sky,— It looks out from every star. It is among the hills and valleys of the earth, where the shrubless mountain tops pierce the thin atmosphere of eternal winter—or where the mighty forest fluctuates before the strong wind, with its darkwave of green foliage. It is spread out like a legible language upon the broad face of the unsleeping green ocean. It is the poetry of nature. It is this, which uplifts the spirit within us, until it is tall enough to overlook the shadows of our place of probation, which breaks link after link, the chain which binds us to materiality; andwhich opens to our imagination a world of spiritual beauty and holiness.—Essex Gazette.

CHOLERA.

Dr.Edward Tegart, Inspector General of Army Hospitals, has sent a note to theLondonGlobe on the subject of Cholera which appears to be of the utmost importance. It details his own case and cure,—On Wednesday, the 18th July I was seized with a slight diarrhœa, which continued and increased, on the dayfollowing the matter discharged was passed without pain, so that I was thrown off my guard as to the nature of the complaint. Towards evening of the second day, I became restless and feverish; at midnight my pulse 120 and very weak, spasms in my legs and arms led me to think, for the first time that I was labouring under spasmodic cholera. On examination of the copious flowings from the bowels, I found them to consist of a limped fluid resembling chicken broth or barley water. This is now understood to be the serious part of the blood, when this escapes, only the thick dark particles remain in the blood vessels—which soon become stagnant and occasion death. This was nearly the case with me as the pulse had become almost inperceptible,and the dark streaks
