transmitted to him with the judgement of the court. He should have reasoned with himself thus.—This is a case of life&death The souls of these unhappy men, may be hurried into eternity, with manifold sins unrepented. Reason, aswell as law, requiresthat they should be rescued, if there be a solitary doubt of their guilt; as it is better that many guilty men should escape, than an innocent one be executed. It is certain that they were levied for six months. But to ascertain the legality of that levy, and, of course, the justice of the sentence, I must have recourse to Gov. Blount for the order from the President, under which the levy was made; and to the Secretary of War to know if such order was issued. If the order was not given, the whole proceedings are without the sanction of law; and these hapless men shall be restored to their families, their friends and their country.—In this grave manner, Fellow Citizens, should he have soliloquized on that solemn occasion. If he had been thoughtful enough to have made this application, the Secretary of War would have informed him, that no such order was on the records of the Department; and, consequently, had not been issued. And Gov. Blunt, unable to produce his authority, would have been forced to admit the illegalty of his own conduct. Having very recently, been called upon by the Military Committee in Congress, for information on the subject, he failed, in reply, to exhibit any order from the Department, and merely furnished his own unlicensed order of the 20th of May, which is wholly irrelevant to the point in question. The conclusion, then, is inevitable, that it was the sacred duty of Gen. Jackson, thus to have investigated the law, and been determined by it, and the dictates of humanity. Instead of this, by a wanton exercise of his power, he consigned to the cold and silent grave, six of his wretched countrymen. Great God! Has it come to this?—That, in a land of boasted freedom, military power should legalize and sanctify the stupid error of a Governor, or the still more stupid sentence of an ignorant and unfeeling Court—That our laws and Constitution should be dispoiled, by a ruthless hand, their fairest attributes the security of life and personal liberty, those sacred principles for which our fathers in England, struggled against their iron-handed and perfidious monarch? Is it thus, that you honour the memory of the patriots of the Revolution, by surrendering the rights and liberties for which they fought & bled, that you might enjoy them? The countenance which many of you are this day giving to that bloody deed, by endeavoring to exalt its perpetrator to the highest honors you can bestow, is a virtual renunciation of the principles for which your ancestors pledged their lives and fortunes, that they might secure them to you as an inheritance. But, I think I know the cause, you were then distant from the scene; the time at which it transpired is now remote; and you have neverfelt the emotions whichwould have agitated you as spectators. Oh! my Fellow Citizens, could you only have witnessed the last sad hours of those brave men, who had fought like lions in the Indian Wars; have seen them descend from the fatal cart that bore them to the spot, and shot down like bullocks in a slaughter-house!—could you have seen the earth drink their blood, and smoke, as it were with indignation—could you have seen the ill fated Lewis spring upon his feet covered with a dozen wounds, and have heard him cry out to his executioners, —"Have I not atoned for the offence? Shall I not live? Shall I not live a little longer in the world?"—If you had witnessed these things, and known that they were innocent men; victims to the error of a Governor, the ignorance of a court, and the hard-heartedness of their General, I am deceived in the opinion I have formed of your humanity, if you would not have shrunk with instinctive horror, and damned the man that had the power to save them. I would say to every son, and daughter of America, raise not up a man to rule over you, who if your county should again be scourged by war, as Commander in Chief of your armies, will be the arbiter of your Father' & your Son's & your Brothers' fates.

A FELLOW CITIZFN.

The redoubtable M. M. Noah, Judge of Israel, &c. has been publickly cowhided in the streets of New York, for indecency in language in his paper, used towards mr. J. E. Roberts.

The Combination Papers are still prating about the gross impudence and impropriety of the friends of mr. Webster, giving him a dinner after his return to Boston from Washington. Forsooth these editors must be hungry dogs; and grudge mr. Webster the feast among his friends. The cloudy aspect of Jackson affairs has rendered them crusty. Cheer up hearties: we promise to give some of your leaders, Duff Green, and others, an invitation to dinner, to be absent from Washington, next 4th of March—so cheer up.

The plan of opposition to the present Administration was coveval with its induction into office with Gen. Jackson and a few others. Immediately after the result of the presidential election by Congress was known, Gen. Jackson wrote to a citizen of Montgomery County, Maryland, to engage his talents in the establishment of a Press in the Western Country. This, we say, was at the time the administration was first formed—before its principles and measures were adopted—consequently, the opposition, amongst the leaders was unjustifiable and unamiable. Now, we put this question to the friends of the General. Does his conduct in this instance tally with his own loud professions of virtue and determination "not to seek after office?" And, further, is it magnanimous in a candidate for the presidency, thus to comport himself towards his competitors? We pause for reply.

The 1st and 2d numbers of a new paper, printed at Princess Ann, in this state, have been received at this office. The editors unequivocally announce their preference for the present administration; and declare their willingness to enter the arena of political strife, and repel the ruthless attacks, levelled at the virtuous, in power. We wish them success in their enterprise—and judging from their opening numbers, do not doubt but that a liberal publick will award it to them.

A Sneezer.---H. W. C. Snitcher, of Lower Penns Neck, N. J. appointed one of the Jackson Committee of Vigilance, says he is "not a Jackson man, far from it, and can never support a man who in cold blood murdered six unoffending militiamen, and who voted to deprive every POOR man of his VOTE by disqualification. The Jackson men have taken a good many tartars of late.

AN OPPOSITION TRICK!

A mr. Benton visiting New York a few days since, was questioned by the Advocate whether he was the author of the piece giving an account of Jackson's attack on him in Nashville. The Advocate was misinformed—it was Nath. S. Benton, Senator of New York; and not Thos. H. Benton. But mark the miserable trickery of Noah. He says we are authorized by Senator Benton to say that he never wrote the letter in question!

Canal Revenue—The amount of toll received in April and May, by the Collector at Albany, is fifty five thousand, seven hundred and thirty seven dollars.

A London paper says—"It appears to be beyond question, that the Russian army, from its General to the meanest boy, is impelled by an almost enthusiastic desire to come in collision with the Turkish forces. So strong is this mania for a Turkish war, that it may be almost doubtful whether the Russian autocrat in his present circumstances, could resist the current of opinion which acts so strongly throughout the whole of his population."

Newspapers, or the contents of newspapers are now-a-days the only topics of conversation. According to the old adage "a man might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion," applies with more truth to newspapers. Let a man go into company with the Ladies—the first question is, have you seen the Nashville Committee's reply to the charge against the General, that he is a property qualification advocate, that the Adams-men have attempted to gull the people with. Aye, but stop, says a red-haired lady, in the corner—you must not suppose Judge Overton, and those of his colleagues, who were present, when Jackson supported the resolution requiring a property-qualification in a citizen of Tennessee to enable him to hold an office and to vote in every county where he holds 200 acres of land—You cannot, I say, expect these men to acquiesce in the charge against the General, because, they advocated the same measure—they know better than to criminate the General, for a thing they were equally guilty of themselves; &c.

Thus, you find newspaper topics the subject of conversation wherever you go;—The Tariff Bill, the Robard's Affair, the Rabun Affair, the Indian Agency, Louaillier, Senate Chamber, Six Militia Men, John Woods, Guent Treaty, Russel Correspondence, Federalism, Republicanism and a half a dozen other isms, Harris Letter, Apostacy from Federalism, Hartford Convention, 2d Section, Bargain and intrigue, alias, Coalition, Webster letter, Wharfield, do. Completion of Combinations, 7 Regulars, Indian Massacre, and a thousand other topics connected with the politics of the day, engage equally the attention of politician, farmer, merchant, maid, widow, and wife. And in fact, it appears that a man really knows nothing that doesn't know the contents of the last paper. Oh! the last paper—give me the last paper. Thus, each succeeding paper gives new subjects for argument, &c.

Since newspaper reading is the rage of the day; every editor ought to strive to make his sheet as agreeable as possible—And leave no exertion untried to make it equally interesting.

DEBTS.

A man who does'nt pay a debt at the time of contracting; or in a reasonable time thereafter, should never complain of being compelled to it. He ought to reflect, that while he is enjoying the use, &c. of the purchased article, the creditor is unjustly kept out of his dues. It is not the business of the debtor, to know whether the creditor is in want of money; his only business is to pay him; to give him his own, and release himself from an obligation.

We learn by the Indiana Journal that a rencontre took place at the mouth of Spoon river on the Illinois, about the 20th ult. between 5 white men and 15 or 20 Indians, which resulted in the death of three of the latter. The Indians had got whiskey and were drunk; demanded more whiskey, drew their knives, and attacked the whites, but having lost three of their number, ran to their camp for their guns, when they were quieted and prevented from further mischief.

Petticoat Government.—The good people of the township of Ormsted, being persuaded of the superiority of the "petticoat form of government" to all others have for two successive years made choice of a female constable, as a "terror to evil does," within the bounds of the township. Last year the lot fell upon Miss Clementina Trafford, who in person or by deputy, discharged the office to the high satisfaction of the inhabitants; and the appointment of Miss Catharine Newton, as constable for the ensuing year, was last week duly confirmed by the Court and Jury at the Salford election.

A place that has once known the advantages of a Public Journal, finds it difficult to be without one—the people look to it as a source of all kinds of information—Foreign and Domestic—Local and otherwise—If a man wish to sell any kind of Produce, or any article whatever, convenience and propriety point him to a news paper. If he wish to purchase, the same propriety teaches him to look to the columns of a neighboring Public Journal for information—for it is almost morally impossible that among the numerous readers who generally subscribe to a newspaper, that there should not be some in its extended circulation who have not the article wanted to dispose of.

The New York National Advocate states---"In our intercourse last week, we had an opportunity to converse with men of candor and intelligence from nearly every district in the State and we are satisfied that the Administration Presidential candidate will receive from 21 to 27 electoral votes from New York. We are confident from the best information that can now be obtained, that the Adams vote will not be less than 21, and it may exceed 27.-Del. Jour

Passage of the Pruth.

Wittgenstein's army has crossed the Pruth, and is rapidly marching southward. The naval armament of Sebastopel co-operates on the Euxine, and the division of Paskovitch is advancing through Armenia and Anatolia, to hem in the Sultan on the side of Asia.

LONDON, May 13.

A report is prevalent in the City, that a Message will be sent to the House of Commons this evening for the purpose of getting supplies for FIFTEEN THOUSAND SAIL OF THE LINE, AND FIVE THOUSAND MEN, to form an expedition to the Morea.

The London Morning Chronicle of the 3d of May states that on the preceding evening, a carriage drawn by kites passed through the north gate of Hyd-Park, followed by a number of equestrians and carriages, and proceeded towards Uxbridge. The vehicle is called a Charvolant, and was steered by a youth, through crowded road, with great dexterity.

Easy method of dislodging poison from the Stomach.—Place the patient so that his mouth shall be considerably lower than the stomach as when a man's body is lying across a chair or on a sofa, and his face is brought near the floor—and then necessary, to press on the stomuch with the hand. The cardic orifice opens readily in such a case, and the stomach empties itself like any other inverted vessel.
