

Singular Circumstance.—A short time since a sister and a brother met together, in this city, after a separation of 32 years, during which time neither of them had ever heard from the other. The parents of these persons, and another daughter, had been inhabitants of Philadelphia, and died in that city in 1807. In consequence of the embarrassed state in which they left their circumstances, the surviving relatives found it necessary to separate the children, who were then very young. Two relatives of the mother took the two female children to a distant part of the country, and the boy was taken by a friend of the father, to a distance from the two females. All three lived and grew up; and each was aware of the fact that a fraternal degree of kindred bound all, although the females knew not their brother's abode, nor he theirs.—One sister now resides in Ohio; the other has lived a considerable time in this city, where she is happily married. About two years since the brother came to reside in this city, and continues to work at his trade; during six months his sister lived next door to the house in which he still boards. The sister had many fruitless searches for him, and once went, some time since, to Philadelphia to endeavor to find some account of him, but without effect. Finally, she some days since, heard his name mentioned casually in conversation, and a presentment, real or imaginary, struck her that he was "the long sought for one." She proceeded to her old neighbour's house and waited till the young man came home from work, and a scene of mutual recognition led to a pleasure more difficult to describe than imagine, after separation of relatives so closely allied, during a period so long.

These circumstances have come to us through a correct source, from one who has been acquainted for a considerable length of time with the sister residing in this city; yet it is worked up into a "new novel," even by the author of Pelham, it is probable the critic of the day would denounce it as "improbable." But it has often been remarked, and with propriety, that "Truth is often more marvellous than Fiction."—N. Y. Cour. & Enq.

Disastrous Occurrence.—On Tuesday night last Midshipman ALEXANDER L. DADE, of the U. S. Navy, met an untimely end by drowning, having fallen overboard from the North Carolina 74, lying at the Gosport Navy Yard. He had passed the evening on board, playing at chess with a brother officer, until 10 o'clock when his companion retired to his berth, and Mr. Dade went up on deck, but did not make his appearance again, nor was it till the next morning that he was missed. As it was certain that he had not gone ashore, the inevitable conclusion was that he had fallen overboard, (probably going into the bow of the ship,) and being stunned in his fall, either by striking against the chain cable or the shutters of the bow-port, was disabled from making any effort to save himself from drowning. The circumstance, too, of his hat being found near the spot, gave additional strength to his belief, and orders were given by the Commandant of the Yard to drag for the body, which duty was performed during Wednesday and Thursday without success. This morning, however, the body was found near the ship, much bruised about the head.

Mr. Dade was the son of Judge Dade, of Prince William, (Va.) and only 18 years of age. He was a young gentleman of highly prepossessing manners, and bade fair to be an ornament to the service in which he had embarked.—N. York Herald.

LIBERAL SENTIMENT. The London Quarterly Review, the organ and the tool of the British Ministry, used the following language in reference to the decree of Charles X. establishing a censorship of the press.

We hope and trust that the King and his present ministry may succeed in establishing a censorship on the press, and likewise in acquiring so decided a preponderance in the Chamber of Deputies, that its existence, as an independent body, capable of bearing the monarchy, as it has recently done, shall no longer be recognised. This we own, will be a virtual abolition of the charter, but the question is obviously reduced to this—Shall the monarchy, which is suitable to the country, be overthrown, or shall the charter, which, in every possible point of view, is unsuitable to it, be abrogated?

We should like to see a restoration of the ancient authority of the crown. The French nation will require to be governed with a tight hand.

The necessity of the case requires that we should not shrink from the trial but be prepared to witness, as the less grievous of the two evils, the re-establishment of a tolerably absolute authority on the part of the crown of France. If this be impossible, or if the attempt be bungled in the execution, we may bid adieu to repose and buckle on our armor for another quarter of a century!!!

Pulpit Ingenuity.—A preacher in the neighborhood of Blackfriars, London, not undeservedly popular, had just finished an exhortation strongly recommending the support of a certain very meritorious institution. The congregation was numerous and the chapel was crowded to excess. The discourse being finished, the plate was about being handled round to the respective pews, when the preacher made this short address to the congregation:—"From the sympathy I have witnessed in your countenances, and strict attention you have honored me with, there is one thing I am afraid of, that some of you may be inclined to give too much.—Now it is my duty to inform you that justice, tho' not so pleasant, should always be a prior virtue; generosity, therefore, as you wish all to be immediately waited on in your respective pews, I wish to have it thoroughly understood that no person will think of putting any thing into the plate who cannot pay his debts." I need not add that this produced a most overflowing collection.

Liberty Hall.—Old Heywood tells a story of a woman that "had a husband, who customarily came drunk home, and shrinking from his stool or chair, would oft fall on the floor and there lie along; and still when she called him to bed, he would answer her, 'Let me alone, the tenement is mine own, and I may lie where I list, so long as I pay rent for the house.' Some few nights after coming home in the like tune, and sitting asleep in a chair before the chimney, his wife being gone to bed, present the man falls into the fire. The maid cries out to her mistress, 'Oh! mistress, my master is false and lies in the fire, even in the midst of all the fire.' She lay still, and turning on the other side, said, 'So long as hee pays rent for the house hee may lie where hee listeth.'

An American drummer having strolled from the camp, approached the English lines, and before he was aware, was seized by the picket, and carried before the commander on suspicion of being a spy, disguised in a drummer's uniform. On being questioned, he humbly told the truth, and declared who and what he was. This not gaining credit, a drum was sent for, and he was desired to beat a couple of marches, which he readily performed, and thus removed the commander's suspicion of his assuming a fictitious character. "But, my lad," said he "let me now hear you beat a retreat." "A retreat!" replied the drummer, "there is none such beat in our service."

With all the evidence of a fixed and settled determination on the part of the leaders of Mr. Clay's party, we have asked in vain the reasons why the National Administration should be put down. Its measures have been of the most salutary kind—it has reformed the abuses which existed when it came into power—it has applied the broom of reform to the Augean stable—it has restrained the hand of extravagant legislation—it has guaranteed by its measures, the speedy payment of the National Debt—it has procured from foreign powers that justice which had been vainly sought for our citizens by its predecessors—it has put a check upon the vice of duelling; and has brought every department of the government into the full tide of successful experiment. And save the lamentations of a few dissipated defuncts, and the outcry of a few reformed politicians, who left their offices for the good of their country, a general sentiment, appropriately of its measures, prevails throughout the community.—Western Emporium.

PRIZE ESSAY.

THE MEDICAL AND CHIRURGICAL FACULTY OF MARYLAND, at their annual convention held in the city of Baltimore, on the 8th June, 1830, passed the following resolution, to wit:

"Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed to award a premium of one hundred dollars for such essay as they or a majority of them shall consider worthy thereof. The subject of such essay to be selected by said committee."

In conformity with the benevolent intentions of the Faculty expressed in the aforesaid resolution the committee offer a premium of $100 for an essay upon the nature and sources of the Malaria, or miasmata, from which originate the family of diseases usually known by the denomination of bilious diseases, together with the best means of preventing the formation of Malaria, removing the sources, and obviating their effects upon the human constitution when the cause cannot be removed.

The committee have been induced to call the attention of the profession to this subject, because of its vast importance to society at large. The immense extent to which this fruitful cause of disease operates, has not yet been accurately calculated, nor any probable estimate made of the mortality which it occasions. The public attention has been justly directed to other subjects of general improvement, but we believe no adequate effort has yet been made to awaken and direct the public mind to the prevention of the evils dependent upon Malaria, although it is well known to medical men to be extending its influence, and threatening to depopulate some of the finest sections of this country, as it has already depopulated some of the fairest portions of the old world.

Candidates for the prize are to cause their dissertations to be delivered to the subscribers in Baltimore, (postage paid,) on or before the first day of May 1831. Each dissertation to be accompanied by a sealed letter, superscribed with a motto corresponding with that prefixed to the motto of the letters, except that to which the motto of the successful essay shall be affixed, will be opened; the other essays shall be disposed of according to the direction of the proprietors.
