

From the New York Courier & Enquirer.
Opening of the West India Ports.—Commercial Prospects.—Commercial Legislation.—The opening of the British West India ports to American Commerce, of which there is now no doubt, is one of the most important acquisitions to the commerce of the United States, which has taken place these last twenty years. The negotiation by which this point has been achieved, is additional evidence of the good sense, patriotism, and wisdom of the administration of Andrew Jackson. To Connecticut, Maine, North Carolina, Virginia, and other maritime states, it will furnish an outlet for many valuable articles of domestic productions, which have heretofore been left at home, unasked, unbought, and their value lost to the nation. The agricultural interests, the backbone of every state, will receive a new impulse from the prosperous termination of the present negotiation.

But the advantages of this new treaty of commerce, will not be confined to the mere interchange of commodities between the West Indies and the United States. The good feeling, the magnanimous conduct which have led to so desirable a result, will make an impression upon the commercial policy of both countries, tending still further to advance the interests of commerce and navigation. The revolution in France has materially altered the political condition and prospects of the European continent. The spirit of liberty which has spread a blessed light upon the political and social rights of man, must shed a kindred ray upon the freedom of commerce and navigation between states and nations. England by her present compromise with the United States, in relation to the colonial trade, has commenced a system of policy, founded on the spirit of the age, calculated to produce an impression favorable to that nation. What farmer, what merchant, what mechanic in the United States, does not look back with delight upon that bright age of our commercial prosperity, which existed during the wars in Europe, growing out of the French revolution of '89. Previous to the Berlin and Milan decrees of Napoleon, this country enjoyed the most prosperous commerce ever enjoyed by a nation. We were the carriers of the world—the stored hamper floated over 900,000 tons of shipping—not as now 800,000 tons and a doubled population—our farmers found excellent markets for their produce—our merchants freights for every ship—and our artisans business for every hand without fear of depression. This prosperity was placed beyond the reach of high and forced tariff systems, which set rival interests in opposition, and produce bitterness between different sections of a common country. All was energy and industry throughout the nation, and beyond the reach of monopoly, combination, legislation, political schemes. Every class and condition of society flourished. Our merchants became wealthy, liberal and munificent—our mechanics received the most remunerating prices for their labor, and the farmers on the Genesee, Mohawk, Susquehanna, and Connecticut, became rapidly independent and wealthy.

Will those halcyon days ever return? We believe they will. The dawn is spreading around us. The present state of Europe gives every reason to feel such a hope. The spirit of political reform has broken out. The great contest between the rule of despots and the sovereignty of the people is rapidly approaching, and it never has been, nor ever will be achieved without a long and violent contest. Hereditary despots do not give up their power without a struggle.

Believing from every indication, that a short time will put us in a new situation, both politically and commercially, with Europe, the United States are right in preparing, by every honorable means in their power, to avail themselves of the advantages which the late events in Europe have thrown up to view. The present arrangement for the opening of the West India ports, is but the first step in the measures calculated to extend our commerce, benefit our agricultural interest, and give a new impetus to the industry of the whole nation. It secures to us the good feeling of England—a good feeling calculated to endure from every consideration of policy, situation and prospects. It will be the interest, and the pride of all our valuable agricultural interests to trim their sails to the prosperous breeze which the age begins to blow towards our shores. Our commercial laws ought to be so modified as to meet with propriety the approaching state of the world. No class of society has a greater inducement to push this experiment forward than the agricultural interest of the whole nation—the farmer of the north as well as the planter of the south—the inhabitant of Kentucky as well as the citizen of Massachusetts. Let the shackles which have been, from time to time appended to our foreign trade, be judiciously lopped off by a wise and reflecting Congress. It is the interest of agriculture—of manufactures—of commerce that it should be so; for the prospect held out by Europe will be dimmed indeed, unless our National Government accommodates themselves to the spirit of the age, and put the nation in a position to meet the march of circumstances. Secured, so far as commerce is concerned, in the friendship of Great Britain, France and the liberal party throughout the world, and protected by a gallant navy—which ought by all means to be improved and strengthened—if the face of Europe should be changed into contending camps, our neutral trade may receive an accession highly beneficial to every class and every interest in the United States. Let us prepare in time by wise legislation.

YOUNG MEN'S LIBRARY.
THE advocates of intellectual improvement in this Town, have long regretted that a public Library should hitherto have been a desideratum.
The advantages of such an institution need no comment. There is amongst us a class of young persons, who cannot possibly furnish themselves with private Libraries, commensurate with their taste and spirit of inquiry;—for whom such an institution holds forth peculiar facilities. Impressed with these views a number of young men in this Town associated themselves together under the title of the "Young Men's Library Society," and having adopted a Constitution, elected officers, and being patronized by valuable donations of money and books, from several gentlemen in this Town, have determined to open their Library to-morrow, (Wednesday night) the 13th inst. at six o'clock, at Mr. James McNeill's Shoe Store, where for the present the Books are deposited.
The Library is now open for public inspection, and contains several of the latest new works. Persons desirous of becoming subscribers, are informed that the payment of one dollar in advance, constitutes a person a member, on condition of an annual subscription of one dollar from the time of entrance.

PRIZE ESSAY.
THE MEDICAL AND CHIRURGICAL FACULTY OF MARYLAND, at their annual convention held in the city of Baltimore, on the 7th and 8th June, 1830, passed the following resolution, viz:
"Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed to award a premium of one hundred dollars for such essay as they or a majority of them shall consider worthy thereof. The subject of such essay to be selected by said committee."
In conformity with the benevolent intentions of the Faculty expressed in the aforesaid resolution the committee offer a premium of $100 for an essay upon the nature and sources of the Malaria or noxious Miasma, from which originate the family of diseases usually known by the denomination of bilious diseases; together with the best means of preventing the formation of Malaria, removing the sources, and obviating their effects upon the human constitution when the cause cannot be removed.
The committee have been induced to call the attention of the profession to this subject, because of its vast importance to society at large. The immense extent to which this fruitful cause of disease operates, has not yet been accurately calculated, nor any probable estimate made of the mortality which it occasions. The public attention has been justly directed to other subjects of general improvement, but we believe no adequate effort has yet been made to awaken and direct the public mind to the prevention of the evils dependent upon Malaria, although it is well known that to medical men to be expending its influence, and threatening to depopulate some of the finest sections of this country, as it has already depopulated some of the fairest portions of the old world.
Candidates for the prize are to cause their dissertations to be delivered to the subscriber, in Baltimore, (postage paid,) on or before the first day of May 1831. Each dissertation to be accompanied by a sealed letter, superscribed with a motto corresponding with that prefixed to the essay. None of the letters, except that to which the motto of the successful essay shall be affixed, will be opened; the other essays shall be disposed of according to the direction of the proprietors.
HENRY W. BAXLEY,
Secretary to the Committee.
