POETRY.

THE SLEEPING CHILD.

BY LEIGH HUNT.

A brook went dancing on its way,
From bank to valley leaping,
And by its sunny margin lay
A lovely infant sleeping.
The murmur of the purling stream
Broke not the spell which bound him,
Like music breathing, in his dream,
A lullaby around him.

It is a lovely sight to view,
Within this world of sorrow,
One spot which still retains the hue
That earth from heaven may borrow.
And such was this—a scene so fair
Arrayed in summer brightness,
And one pure being resting there
One soul of radiant whiteness!

What happy dreams, fair child, are given
To cast their sunshine o'er thee?
What cord unites thy soul to Heaven,
Where visions glide before thee?
For wandering smiles of cloudless mirth
O'er thy glad features beaming,
Say, not a thought—a form of earth
Alloys thine hour of dreaming!

Mayhap, afar on unseen wings,
Thy sinless spirit soaring,
Now hears the burst from golden springs,
Where angels are adoring,
And with the pure heliacal throng,
Around their Maker praising,
Thy joyous heart may join the song
Ten thousand tongues are raising!

Sleep, lovely babe!—for time's cold touch
Shall make these visions wither;
Youth—and the dreams which charm so much,
Shall fade and fly together,
Then sleep!—while sleep is pure and mild,
Ere earthly ties grow stronger,
When thou shalt be no more a child,
And dream of Heaven no longer.

Advantages of a Memory.—It is related of Sir Boyle Roche, that no man of his day enjoyed more esteem, on account of his perfect urbanity and amiable qualities in private life, or excited so much laughter by the oddities of which he was unconsciously guilty in parliament. Of these the following are specimens:—He said, one night, during a stormy debate, that it was impossible for a man to be in two places at once, unless he was bird or a fish! An opposition member having moved, that, for the purpose of illustrating one of his arguments, an enormous mass of official documents should be read, Sir. Boyle Roche, with the most profound and unaffected gravity, proposed that as the clerk at the table would not be able to get through the papers before morning, a dozen or two of the committee-clerks should be called in to his assistance. "The documents may be divided among them," continued Sir Boyle; "and as they can all read together, the whole will be disposed of in a quarter of an hour." His speeches, on important topics, were prepared for him by Mr. Edward Cooke; and, as his memory was particularly retentive; he seldom committed himself, except when he rose to utter an orignal remark. One night, being unprepared with a speech, and yet feeling a strong inclination to deliver his sentiments, he retired to a coffee-house, in order to mould them into form of an oration. While engaged in this fruitless attempt, he was accosted by Sergeant Stanley, a ministerial member, whose custom it was to rise, towards the close of a discussion, and deliver a long harangue, ingeniously complied from the speeches of those who had addressed the house before him. For this debate, however, he was in a situation to speak earlier than usual, having with great labor, produced an orignal composition; prior to the delivery of which, he had stepped into the coffee-house, in order to refresh his memory by looking once more through the manuscript. This unfortunately for himself, he happened to drop, on retiring. Sir Boyle snatched it up; and, after reading it twice or thrice, (so powerful was his memory,) found himself master of the whole. Hastening to the house, he resumed his seat, and delivered the speech with admirable correctness, to the unspeakable amazement and mortification of the proprietor, who, it appears, had not succeeded in catching the speaker's eye. Meeting Stanley again at the coffee-house, in the course of the night, Sir Boyle returned him his manuscript, with many thanks for what he was pleased to term the loan of it; adding, "I never was so much at loss for a speech in my life, nor ever met with one so pat to my purpose; and, since it is not a pin the worse for wear, you may go in and speak it again yourself, as soon as you please."

London paper.

Interesting Fact.—A few years ago, a very worthy laboring man in this town, who had been so unfortunate as to acquire a habit of drinking spirit, becoming convinced of its ruinous tendency, had strength of mind sufficient to form an effectual resolution of future abstinence. At the time he had a wooden box made, with a hole in the lid, and labelled "RUM," into which he every day dropped as much money as he had been in the habit of spending for liquor. The box was never opened until very recently, when on counting the sum, it was found to amount to no less than one hundred and eighty dollars, with a part of which he purchased a good house lot, and the remainder will go towards getting a neat and comfortable new house upon it.—Salem Gazette.

Canalling Extraordinary.—The Canajoharie Investigator says:—A small boat containing a family of 12 souls, drawn by one man and three boys, passed through this village on Wednesday last, on the Erie Canal. They were from Buffalo, and were on their way to Albany.

From the Spanish Main:—By the schooner Sabina, Capt. Tilyou, from Havana and Sisal, we learn that when she left the latter place, on the 20th June, the governments of Merida and Campeachy were at war, and 4000 troops were investing the latter place, under the command of the governor of Merida.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

The Oxford, N. C. Examiner, in contradicting the rumor of the assassination of ROBERT POTTER, Esq. remarks:

To prevent misrepresentations abroad, we will mention the facts of an occurrence which took place here on Tuesday morning last. On that morning Mr. Potter was shot at in the street by Mr. Richard Taylor, the brother of Mrs. Potter. The gun was heavily charged with shot, five or six of which passed through Mr. Potter's hat, and one cut the skin on the crown of his head. The wound is not serious. Mr. Taylor has given bond for his appearance at the next superior court.
