Week of Prayer.

This religious season among the Protestant churches will begin Sunday evening, Jan. 1, in the Reformed church. This will be a union meeting. Rev. C. L. Kennard will preach. The programme for the week has not been completed.

A Chance to Enlist.

Sergeant George W. Murphy, of Battery H, 3d Regiment of Artillery, Emma Keller, of Borden mine. U. S. Army, arrived here Thursday morning and opened a recuiting office at the St. Cloud Hotel. He is an old and tried soldier who fought in the Union Navy during the Civil War, and the first man to raise the American flag in Alaska after it had been bought by the United States.

Last week the Journal made a point against one of our "lower courts" in the matter of imprisoning "Ali Baba" on a charge of "selling goods with license." It seems now that the paper upon which Judge Hoffman acted was a copy of the warrant, and not the warrant itself. The copy was made hastily, and thus it happened that the latter syllable of the word, "without," was omitted. The impression seems to be, however, that no harm was done it letting Mr. Baba out of jail.

Personal. E. Stanley Hitchins, of St. Paul, Minn., was here several days this week. He is looking well and doing well as an officer in the Freight Claim Department of the Chicago Great Western railway. George Stern, of Lehigh University, is spending the holiday vacation at

J. T. Engleby sends the JOURNAL a capacity to be immediately made by the Roanoke machine company. To the 1.200 men now employed 1,100 will be added making 2,300 in all. Several massive buildings will have to be erected, which, with the additional tools needed, will cost $150,000. The introduction of 1.100 new men means also a monthly pay roll of $150,000 and an addition of not less than 4,000 to the population. This idea can be well appreciated if the reader will imagine the entire town of Lonaconing lifted up and dropped inside the expense. corporate limits of Roanoke. The Journal would have named Frostburg instead of Lonaconing, but this place is too large to serve the purpose of the illustration.
