So Mina was getting tired of him! Well, after all it was better to thoroughly comprehend the whole state of the case. He was too amiable, was he? Mr. Cameron rose, threw aside the crumpled newspaper and walked once or twice the length of the rooms.

"I'll see that the fault is corrected," he said to himself with a grim smile. And he went off to business without the usual "good-by kiss" in which he usually indulged.

Mrs. Cameron went out shopping in the afternoon and was detained a little, out it did not worry her in the least. "Clarence doesn't mind," said she, and so she spent an extra half-hour in deciding whether she should have tau and whether she looked better in a hat "clinching evidence." Beauty's Best Friend. Dr. Frank H. Ingram has disclosed to the readers of the New York World the secret that all beautifully rounded necks and plump shoulders are not the work of nature, but of codliver oil apinto the pores of the skin.

The doctor disapproves the practice. He does not doubt the efficacy, but points out the effect will differ according to the build and constitutional proclivities of the person who makes the experiment. Instead of producing an attractive fullness it may cause misplaced obesity, so that one's figure may be marred rather than improved by the treatment.

All of which induces the very truthful remark that nature is the best friend beauty has. She adapts her work to circumstances. If a woman i thin, she will do well to be satisfied with grace in place of avoirdupois. She can not produce fullness that will be at tractive. If she is stout she injures her looks by applications of remedies that create only a flabby appearance. To adorn nature is the right, privilege and duty of woman, but to try to improve upon nature's work by changing her rules is hopeless and foolish. And there is no need. Tastes differ widely enough to win admiration for all varieties of loveliness.

The Detective's Mistake.

He was considered one of the best in his line. The case that required the most intelligent, persistent and careful work was the one that was usually as. signed to him. He had been at work on one for three or four weeks, and at or pearl gray for her new kid gloves, last had secured what he considered case, and his work had been to entrap the would-be briber. He had done it. He had secured a single $10 note of the bribe money, but that was enough. The envelope containing the money had been opened in the presence of three persons and each had put his mark on the bill, so that it could be identified. Naturally he was jubilant. People will be when they think they have won a great victory, and he had all the evidence he wanted in his pocket-an inside pocket at that. The bird was practically caught and he went home exult-

Now mark what can happen to a man careless. He thought of going to headquarters and depositing his evidence in a vault, but it was a long distance, and then it would be better anyway to go to the chief in the morning and announce that he had bagged the game. So he took it home.

Once or twice he thought he was followed, but when he reached home he scouted the idea, turned in and slept soundly. Robbery did not occur to him

In the morning—well, in the morning the money was gone. He almost fainted when he discovered the loss and rushed into the dining room crying, "I've been robbed! I've been robbed!"

"Nonsense," replied his wife. "What "A $10 bill."

I took it," she said calmly. "I the money in your pocketbook. I just took that loose $10 bill that was in your inside pocket. I'll get you another i' you need it, but I thought that was one you had put aside for me."

He didn't try to explain. He didn't himself. At last he seemed to have places of the Orient! a note to the chief, took it to headquarters and left it. A minute later he was lost in the crowd on the street.

The note read: "Please put me back on patrol duty. work. I married."
