

	PAGE.
Its Members—Necessity for Secrecy,	265
Affectionate Relations of Master and Pupils,	267
Confidence and Friendship among Slaves,	268
Slavery the Inviter of Vengeance,	269

CHAPTER XIX.

THE RUNAWAY PLOT.

New Year's Thoughts and Reflections,	271
Again hired by Freeland,	272
Still Devising Plans for gaining Freedom,	273
A Solemn Vow—Plan Divulged to the Slaves,	274
Arguments in its Support—The Scheme gains Favor,	275
Danger of Discovery—Difficulty of Concealment,	276
Skill of Slaveholders—Suspicion and Coercion,	277
Hymns with a Double Meaning,	278
Author's Confederates—His Influence over them,	279
Preliminary Consultations—Pass- Words,	280
Conflict of Hopes and Fears—Ignorance of Geography,	281
Survey of Imaginary Difficulties,	282
Effect upon our Minds,	283
Sandy becomes a Dreamer,	284
Route to the North laid out—Objections Considered,	285
Frauds Practiced on Freemen—Passes Written,	286
Anxieties as the Time drew near,	287
Appeals to Comrades—A Presentiment,	289
The Betrayal Discovered,	290
Manner of Arresting us,	291
Resistance made by Henry Harris—Its Effects,	292
Unique Speech of Mrs. Freeland,	294
Our Sad Procession to Easton,	295
Passes Eaten—The Examination at St. Michael's,	296
No Evidence Produced—Who was the Betrayer?	297
Dragged behind Horses—The Jail a Relief,	298
A New set of Tormentors,	299
Release of my Companions,	300
Author taken out of Prison and sent to Baltimore,	302

CHAPTER XX.

APPRENTICESHIP LIFE.

Nothing Lost by the Attempt to Run Away,	304
Reasons for sending the Author Away,	305
Unlooked for Clemency in Master Thomas,	306
Return to Baltimore—Change in Little Tommy,	307
Trials in Gardiner's Ship Yard,	308
Desperate Fight with the White Apprentices,	309
Conflict between White and Black Labor,	310
Description of the Outrage,	313
Conduct of Master Hugh,	315
Testimony of a Colored Man Nothing,	316
Spirit of Slavery in Baltimore,	317
Author's Condition Improves,	318

	PAGE.
New Associates—Benefits derived therefrom,	319
How to make a Contented Slave,	320

CHAPTER XXI.

MY ESCAPE FROM SLAVERY.

Manner of Escape not given—Reasons why,	321
Craftiness and Malice of Slaveholders,	322
Want of Wisdom in Publishing Details of Escape,	324
Suspensions Implied by Master Hugh's Manner,	325
Difficulty of Escape—Discontent,	326
Author allowed to Hire his Time,	327
A Gleam of Hope—Hard Terms,	328
Author attends Camp Meeting without Permission,	329
Anger of Master Hugh thereat,	330
Plans of Escape Accelerated thereby,	332
Painful Thoughts of Separation from Friends,	333
The Attempt made—Its Success,	334

CHAPTER XXII.

LIBERTY ATTAINED.

Author a Wanderer in New York—Feelings on Reaching that City,	336
An Old Acquaintance met,	337
Unfavorable Impressions—Loneliness and Insecurity,	338
Apology for Slaves who Return to their Masters,	339
Make known my Condition—David Ruggles,	340
Author's Marriage—Removal to New Bedford,	341
Kindness of Nathan Johnson—Change of Name,	342
Dark Notions of Northern Civilization enlightened,	344
Contrast between the North and the South,	345
Colored People in New Bedford,	346
An Incident Illustrating their Spirit,	347
The Author finds Employment,	348
Denied Work at his Trade,	349
The first Winter at the North,	350
Proscription in the Church,	351
An Incident at the Communion Table,	353
First Acquaintance with the Liberator,	354
Character of its Editor,	355
Prompt Attendance at Anti-Slavery Meetings,	356

CHAPTER XXIII.

INTRODUCED TO THE ABOLITIONISTS.

Anti-Slavery Convention at Nantucket,	357
Author's First Speech,	358
Becomes a Public Lecturer,	359
Youthful Enthusiasm,	360
Difficulties in his Position,	361
His Fugitive Slavery Doubted,	362
Publishes his Narrative—Danger of Recapture,	363
Advised not to Publish his Story,	364