

I know what to say to you about our bargain. I have ample funds, but I cannot call them at once into action, & perhaps may embark myself by such purchases. On the contrary I am unwilling will lose enough of Alex: Kemble, and ought to make out of your purchases every possible advantage to stand ag^t you. Perhaps you had better see me again directly. I shall probably receive a letter from Ken today, and if he is favourable and I engage in the purchase, I shall want to write to Mr. Richardson, & in answer to the letter of Mr. Brooke, & I shall wish to see
