

was had yesterday & for some days previously good reason to expect his recovery. He was attacked by a catarrhal affection about Christmas and was confined to the house for two months. This was succeeded by an intermittent fever which was not conquered till the middle of last week. He was put under a course of strengthening restoratives but these were stopped this morning in consequence of a slight return of fever.

Letters

Dear Mr. John Smith

13th & 30th April

1829