

2. of you — but alas it seems near to give comfort or supplies to them but squandered in reckless idleness & guilt — I cannot say more but

Tuesday 9th Sept

It has become my painful & humiliating duty, My Dear Sir, to apprize you of a circumstance that has come to my knowledge within the last three days of a nature so disgraceful in itself & so degrading in its effect that, but from hope of awakening yr pity for my children on whose a Parents crimes must reflect, I know not whether I could bring myself to the task of telling you — Circumstances made it necessary that when any of Mr Tiffman's creditors called or corresponded with their agents that I should see them, and on Saturday I was called to speak with Henry the Englishman who
