

HANDKERCHIEFS

ALMOST as countless as snow-flakes are the myriads of Handkerchiefs that float across the ocean for Wanamaker distribution. These little squares of linen, insignificant as they seem, hold a very important position as a universal need; and Wanamaker is the foremost supplier of America. Absolutely pure linen cloth, with no exceptions at any price, is the inflexible quality standard at Wanamaker's. The variety of styles is almost marvelous. Our handkerchief buyer spends weeks every year searching out the best and finest, the daintiest, and the newest things to be found in every handkerchief producing country of the old world.

Making SHIRTS for Men

We have a high ideal in the matter of fine Shirts. Our organization for Making Shirts to Order is the most perfect that has been reached anywhere.

We have the best cutter and the best shirt makers in the country, and men that know all about shirts to talk it over with you.

The finest shirting silks from Paris are here; the choicest madras and cheviot from the Andersons of Glasgow; fine French percales and flannels; superb linens for dress shirts. Our shirt chief makes a personal tour abroad to get the choicest stuffs that are made. There is no equal variety brought to America.

The madras shirt that you get made elsewhere for five dollars is made better here for $3.50. The material is the same. We've proved that to other men—we'll prove it to you.

The French silks make the handsomest shirts a man can put on. They're made up superbly. $12 each.

Here are Unshrinkable Flannel Shirts in handsomest styles for golfers or other outdoor men. $6.50 each.

Reveries of the FIRE-DOGS

Men will not give up the sentiment and poetry of the old fire-place. The stove came and went—it was not nature. But cellar furnaces and steam-pipes cannot rob us of the flame of the log and the glow of the coal that the human heart loves. Who does not conjure a delightful picture from the Reveries of a Bachelor, where he says:

"As for the fire, I keep the little hearth so hot as to warm half the cellar below, and the whole space between the jambs roars for hours together with white flame * * * As night approaches, I have a huge pile of oak and hickory placed beside the hearth; I put out the tallow candle on the mantel, then, drawing my chair directly in front of the blazing wood, and setting one foot on each of the old fire-dogs (until they grow too warm) I dispose myself for an evening of such sober and thoughtful quietude, as I believe, on my soul, that very few of my fellowmen have the good fortune to enjoy."

Builders have discovered that the grate must be in every home, and hence the vast demand that has come for Fire-place Fixtures.

We have such a collection as is probably not matched in variety anywhere. In the exclusive stores where the same fine goods are kept prices are universally higher, because less economically sold than here. The range of style and prices is very broad, though none but safe and worthy kinds are shown. Splendid assortments in both brass and black iron.
