

April 7th 1809.

Dear Lloyd:

I received your letter of February 26th, which I answered promptly. I suppose of course you received it, or else I should have heard from you again. I think courtesy, as well as duty, should have forced you to answer it ere this. Can I tell me in that you expected to go to Delaware the first of this month, which I sincerely hope you have done. There must be some active steps taken, for the investment of the large sum of money which must now be lying idle, for I feel that I am not fulfilling my duty, or keeping my oath, in allowing things to be conducted, in this
