Dear Cousin Henrietta:

I received your letter, and was very glad to hear from you. Everything goes very nicely at home. I fear you did not quite understand my allusions to the proceeds of the picture. My recollection was that you paid a note for your sister because she was unable to sell the picture. I suppose that it she now sold it, that a part of the proceeds, it not all, might go to you. However, that is none of my business. If your sister wishes to sell the picture, I would be willing to buy it at the price named some time ago, namely, $400.

If you think it worth while, please take it up with Cousin Maria, and let her know about it. I have had a little correspondence with Mrs. Eliza about her portrait. I send you a copy of my last letter to her, in answer to a letter of hers, which I also enclose.
