

maintain a monopoly of raw material.

MR. WHITELEY: Upon that point, Mr. Examiner, counsel for the Commission contends that we are not limited to the particular cases pleaded under these lettered sub-paragraphs. We make a general charge that is contained in the charging paragraph at the beginning of this count and then it is true that we specifically plead certain practices used by the respondent under our procedure which is equitable, rather than according to the fixed rules of pleading in common law of court. We are not limited to these specific charges that are set out in the lettered sub-paragraphs, but can offer evidence of any acts tending to prove the general allegations pleaded in the charging paragraph.

THE EXAMINER: From what I gather from what the witness has already stated these matters took place in British Guiana; is that it, the bauxite matter?

MR. WHITELEY: Yes, this particular instance.

THE EXAMINER: I am going to let this witness testify, Mr. Smith. I don't know or cannot tell at this time, but I am going to give you an opportunity to object later. If I do not think what he says is relevant to the issue here, I will listen to a motion to strike.

MR. SMITH: Just to complete this we except to and object to the statement of counsel for the Commission, now made for the first time in this case, that he is not