Dear Lloyd:

Your letter of the 13th received. I wrote you Monday merely to acknowledge receipt of your check for $211.40. I was leaving the office when your letter was received and did not take time to look up the old note, but enclose it herewith. Amount of which is $533.75. I am marking the note paid.

The amount of the proceeds of your note which was forwarded to me by the Centerville National Bank was $339.33, as per correspondence attached. The face of the note according to this letter from the Bank is $350 and the term of the note six months.

I have had a little set back within the past few days owing to a slight illness but will be on the job again and working hard shortly.

Sincerely,

P. S. I am returning to you a memorandum which you sent early in the spring, showing the condition of your account with me at the time you left for Europe, and the manner in which you had planned to straighten it out.
