Edw. B. Emory.

Dear Sir. –

I think I have waited very patiently for my wages, but it appears they are not forthcoming.
I think I earned them well and fairly and it is right that I should have them.
If you have forgotten it, allow me to jog your memory and say if it is not paid I shall use lawful means to secure its payment.
I assure you this is very unpleasant to me and the first time that it ever became at all necessary, though I have worked for almost all kinds of people.
"Honor" you know "is a great thing with a gentleman."

Yours &c

H. C. Day.
