The Young Giant of Turf Literature.

A FEW EXCERPTS FROM THE PRESS REGARDING OUR 1891 HOLIDAY ISSUE:

One of the handsomest papers printed.—Chicago Daily News.

A credit to Chicago.—Chicago Journal.

A sure winner over all competitors.—Toledo (O.) Journal.

A mammoth edition—not only a volume but a horse library in itself.—Tennessee Farmer.

Will probably never be excelled.—Sturgis (Mich.) Mail.

Bright as its many-colored title page, it is but a cover to the brighter things within.—Creston (Iowa) Times.

A revelation in turf journalism.—Coshocton (O.) Age.

Worth more than a year's subscription.—Yarmouth (N. S.) Light.

The most handsome publication of the kind that ever came to the Tribune exchange table.—Hastings (Neb.) Tribune.

It was at once a surprise and delight, and will be treasured for months to come for its richness of illustration and wealth of reading matter. The REVIEW is about the youngest of the turf journals of the country and is already one of the ablest and strongest.—Manchester (N. H.) Mirror and Farmer.

When we wrote our "Father Time" notice of the REVIEW a year ago, we thought the acme of editorial and artistic skill had been scaled, but now we are led to exclaim ex pede Herculum.—Kell's Iowa Turf.

It ranks the peer of any turf journal ever issued.—Rushville (Ind.) Graphic.

No other approached it.—Nebraska Farmer.

A hard issue to excel.—California Breeder and Sportsman.

Above all others in artistic design and general make up.—Baltimore (Md.) News.

A joy forever to horsemen.—Danville (Ky.) Advocate.

Full to overflowing with valuable reading matter.—Western Horseman.

A signal triumph for the publishers.—Detroit (Mich.) Free Press.

Overflowing with useful, statistical, historical and practical horse matter, profusely illustrated.—American Horse Breeder.

Beautiful and elaborate.—Chicago Herald.

Its Management is Enterprising and Progressive. Its Editorial Staff is Scholarly and Aggressive. Its Contributors Embrace the Best Turf Writers in the Country. Its Pictorial and Mechanical Departments are Unexcelled. Its Editorials are Searching and Fearless. Its Statistics are Comprehensive and Complete. Its Illustrations are Superb and Life-like.

THE ISSUE OF MARCH 22 will contain an advance chapter of JOHN H. WALLACE'S long-promised work on "The Origin, History, Breeding and Development of the Trotting Horse," and the subject is handled in a masterly manner. Also an article from the well-known California turf writer, HARVEY WARDE PECK, on "The Care and Management of Stallions." A highly interesting story entitled "What Wellion Won," by ROLAND B. HAMILTON, and other instructive and interesting matter.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER FREE.—Our magnificent Christmas Number for 1891, containing 148 pages, over 100 illustrations of noted horses, five Prize Articles, and valuable statistical matter will be sent free to all new subscribers. A free sample copy of our regular issue will be cheerfully sent to any address on application.
