Dear Mother —

I am very tired tonight so I will not be able to write very much. I have been leaning over a drafting table since seven this morning & only too about twenty minutes of fat lunch.

I have a slightly disconnected feeling about the lack. But that is one of the little occurrences I have to put up along with the spiders.

The only part I mind about it is the work is still piled up head high.

There are only two of us in the office with three parties in the field & another to be started in tomorrow.

Mr. Lams seems to think we should cover snow ground so he is going to stay on tomorrow & see how it is done.

I do not know but what I will have a better chance to loaf than I had to day. I shall sure take a full
