My dear Mother,

I arrived here safely at about nine o'clock. The porter did not wake me up, so I went part way to railroad yard. Fortunately, the train stopped continually on its way to the yard, and I was able to get off about a mile or so from Boston. I did not lose much time, as I awoke at a quarter after eight and was at Cambridge at nine or thereabouts.

Tell Clem that I left my brush and comb in the bath-room, and shall be much obliged to him if he will bring <sup>them</sup> ~~it~~ up when he comes.
