

St. John's College,
Annapolis, Md.
President's Room.

April 3 1900

My dear Mrs. Wilmer,

I have received your letter of Sunday, and am very glad to be able to tell you that Harry seems to be quite well and is taking his meals regularly, but that I am not allowing him to leave his room at all for fear of risk in taking cold. I am very glad he has been comfortable through the attack, as of course any boy who is thrown out of the regular school life and recreations must miss the tender, watchful care that he has always found in his own home, and which can not be given in a large institution, however anxious one may be to take every precaution.

I do not think it will be necessary for him to leave the College before the holidays, but, should I see any signs of trouble with his eyes or indeed in any way, I shall be sure to communicate with you. And also, I will endeavor to see that he runs no risk.

With kind regards,

I am,

Very sincerely yours,

James F. ...
