It is believed and confidently asserted, that owing to the injudicious and inaccurate manner in which the books and accounts of partnerships are mostly kept and settled, individuals are very frequently deprived of their rights, either designedly or inadvertently : therefore, those who are about to form connections in business, would promote their interest by having their books regularly organized and kept ; and most of those already connected, would doubtless derive advantages from having their books examined and adjusted. Executors and Administrators would save themselves much trouble in settling with the Orphans' Court, by previously having their vouchers properly prepared, and accounts (the forms of which are known to very few) regularly and correctly stated.
