

naval, or be it Military; will spare you some Equipage for one thousand Men. -

What to do for Men for the Lictors, I know not: limited service has tempted but a very few, probably when there gets round to it. B. his personal idleness & interest may be attended with more success, than those of others. -

You will perceive by the copy of Mr. Baynes letter, that Sir Geo. Pocock appears to have been rather precipitate in the release of his prisoners.

Mr. Miller late Agent for Corsica, & who went with the Cortes we sent with the Military Post to Salona, writes me from thence, that he expects to bring away all the British & Cors in the Southern States, as this is the case, I don't see how Spain will refuse allowing an equal number of American Prisoners brought here yesterday by the Cortes, I believe in her - but in this, as well as in all other matters relating to Corsica

I suppose you would wish me to be governed a good deal by the opinion & advice of Colonel Barclay. -

You may be assured that
