

Belleisle along the Coast of Labrador, or round by the East Coast of Newfoundland (as information and prospects may determine) to the Coast of Greenland, where the entire whale fishing of the Queeny being without protection may be speedily & completely destroyed. By the time this could be accomplished, the same route may be retained home, so as to enter some convenient eastern port in all the month of September. In this route you will find great resource & refreshment in the fish with which those Seas abound, as well as in that of the fishing vessels you may capture and destroy, moreover the moderate & humidity of the Climate will admit of a very moderate consumption of water.

The force of the Queeny now on our Coast and the expected success forbids any reasonable expectation of getting prizes safe into our ports during the Summer months. The risk of capture is so great that the public interest seems to demand rather the destruction of every prize than to weaken your Crew by attempting to send them in, particularly with Military or Naval Stores.
