Richard Spencer the witness, being cross-interrogated on the part of the Defendants, says

To the fourth interrogatory, he answereth and says "that he does not recollect the day or month when General Reed died, but that it was in the year 1829, and on the same day on which the agreement was made between this deponent and General Reed, in the presence of Alexander B. Hanson, for the day of the sale by the sheriff for said "Hunting field Estate."

To the fifth interrogatory he answereth and says "that he does not recollect how many days after the agreement was made between this deponent and General Reed, marked Exhibit A, it was, when it was agreed the Sheriffs should sell said land, but that it was some-time in the month of November of the same year."

To the sixth interrogatory he answereth and says "that there was no other agreement in writing made and signed between him and General Reed in reference to the sale of "Hunting-field Estate" than the one marked Exhibit A."

To the seventh interrogatory he answereth and says that the largest part of the wheat was seeded before and the balance after the death of General Reed - that John Martin as the overseer superintended the seeding of the wheat - that from three to five ploughs besides those furnished by this deponent, were regularly in the field, and said to belong to General Reed, that before the death and in the presence of General Reed, this deponent consented and agreed to give to said John
