You have in proof of this the limited states. I had precious minerals been found there at their early clothe =
- ment, the manie for gold suring would have dubdied every enelicated for the more useful engagement, and instead of abundance, joined by steady habits of industry and independence, like many other people, licentisussies, anarchy, and except in the best families, want would have been the case.

Want of this important matter has been the result of agricultural de = feets in the bolony. You are aware that manufacturing establishments are common in countries where agriculture is prized and encouraged, ex cept those of large commercial transactions where by interchange of commodities, the vacu material is procured. Und if we would es tablish manufactories, the importance of agriculture must be felt and attended to with constant and unliving will-go a head principles.

The vesult of duck a course of anxious and unflinking lost, will be, that, the things which was seen beyond our ability of attainment, will be vaised and browned for the support and honor of our individual
