My dear Sir.

I thank you for your favor of the 24th instant just received.
Although you cannot find the letter containing the remark ascribed by you to President Benton, I think it most probable, that your first impression in regard to the source of the remark was correct: and that the unpleasant feeling evinced in the letter of Mr Benton towards our friend the Financial Secretary, is in great measure owing to representations made by ~~certain~~ parties in this country. But whatever be the source of the difficulty, I was satisfied, that there was a state of things
