including Armistead Miller, who, although having been once sent as an emigrant, will now be sent free of charge with the others, by our Penna. Soc'y.

The B. of Missions adopted this arrangement partly from economy, partly from expediency; never having before sent coloured missionaries in the Cabin, they are unwilling to make a change in their policy, in the present instance, especially as there are other respectable coloured persons going in the steerage - the intimate friends & associates of these young men, and of the families, at least, of two of them.

If you have mislaid the list sent by Dr Pinkney he will furnish another.

Very Respt'y
