

This is a fine family for emigration. Collins is a good blacksmith a man of industry industri-gious, and acknowledged piety - has great influ-ence in his neighborhood with all classes. His wife expects to be furnished with the tools for his shop for which he will pay as soon as he can. He is indebted forty dollars more than he can pay in consequence of having lost his house and furniture
 - or by fire a short time since. This sum of $40 as we shall be obliged to advance for him as he cannot go this spring -

The heads of this family are represented to be very industrious and managing as is indeed fairly inferred from the fact that the father has kept the wife and most of the children - I think from what I have learned, that they are good emigrants
 - are desirous of going. There is however a balance due for some of the children of seventy eight dollars, which must be paid before they can go, and I know of no way of meeting the demand
