Housekeeping by Wire

Every morning the modern housekeeper turns to her telephone, and begins the day's business. She calls up the butcher, grocer, iceman, market, and orders the daily supplies. She makes an appointment with the dentist, consults her dressmaker, talks with her husband at the office, orders tickets for the afternoon concert; and altogether accomplishes more by telephone in half a day than she could in a week without it.

LAW AND ORDER.

If the facts that come to us through the daily papers of lawless declarations or acts on the part of residents of Smith's Island in reference to the oyster industry are true, but one opinion can be voiced and that is that a great mistake has been made. People have no right to violate the law or to take the law into their own hands, no matter how much aggrieved they may feel themselves to be.

The question of the invasion of old rights by the workings of the oyster law under the Shellfish Commission is an involved one. The staking off of leasing grounds, done by legal authority, may be regarded by oystermen as an invasion of their prescriptive territory. Still if such bounds have been established by legal authority, those who feel aggrieved should rely upon the courts to see that their rights are not invaded.

It is possible that the statements of what is alleged to have transpired at Smith's Island, may have been exaggerated. Meetings for the purpose of preserving rights of a public character are certainly permissible, if kept within proper bound; but if such meetings have a tendency to incite revolutionary or violent schemes, they are unquestionably wrong. The people of Smith's Island have the reputation of being a quiet, law-abiding people, and if the newspaper accounts of recent doings in that community are true, it is a most deplorable situation.—Somerset Herald.

It is well to remember that in these days when so many attempts are made to discredit the Bible it is quoted by Congressmed and other legislators far more often than ever before. Not unoften a quotation from the book makes the strongest argumen for or against a pending measure. In the halls of the State legislatures recently a bill that had for its object the segregation of vice failed to get a single vote because a member of the legislature made an apt quotation from the scriptures just before the vote was taken. Years ago our Congresmen used to quote from heathen classics, but now they quote from the Bible. Does that indicate a chauge in the attitude of public men and in their dispositions? Mr. Bryan has had a big influence in the adoption of this method.
