MONUMENT TO WASHINGTON

A Narration of John Comegys' Part in the Erection of the Monument to Washington in Mount Vernon Place—His Ancestry and Patriotic Ideals—Was Groomsman to Jerome Bonaparte.

To Maryland as a State and to the city of Baltimore was reserved the honor of erecting the first monument to the memory of the immortal Washington. To Mr. John Comegys, born in Kent county, Maryland, and for many years an enterprising merchant in Baltimore is due the honor of being the first individual to originate a movement and enlist the co-operation of his fellow citizens for the purpose of raising a fund by public subscription and otherwise, with which to erect that monument.

Mr. Comegys, with others, memorialized the Legislature of Maryland for leave to raise the sum of $100,000 to be expended in erecting this monument or statue to the memory of Washington. Permission was granted January 10, 1810. In addition to the $100,000 the Legislature voted an appropriation of $178,000 for its completion, enacting that the monument or statue should be conceded the property of the state, and it should have placed thereon an inscription expressive of the gratitude of the State of Maryland to the hero and statesman whose honor and memory the monoment was intended to perpetuate.

On the 4th of July, 1814, was laid the foundation stone in Mount Vernon Place Baltimore. There stands one of the most beautiful and enduring monuments ever erected in the United States in memory of that great man. Its location and environment are ideal.

Mr. John Comegys was active and successful in his worthy and patriotic efforts until death claimed him, which was July 9, 1814. Mr. Comegye waa a descendant of Cornelius Comegys and Milliment, his wife. Ths former was born in Lexmont, and the latter in Barnevelt, one of the states of Holland. They came to America about the year 1652 and settled at or near Jamestown, Va., 40 years after the first permanent settlement at that place. They aubsequently moved to Maryland, and at a council hold at Susquehannough Point July 1, 1661, were admitted into the Province of Maryland, which at that time was, comparatively, an untrodden wilderness, with but a single village settlement, namely, St Mary's the provincial seat of government. They were naturalized at St. Mary's Oct. 10, 1671. This is the only family by that name, of which there are any state records, that ever came from a foreign land and settled in America.

Mr. John Comegys' admiration for Washington and his desire to perpetuate his memory was possibly strengthened by the fact that his ancestors had been active in the affairs of government under Washington and in the more remote struggles of the colonies, namely the Border Wars and the like. William Comegys, an uncle of John Comegys and great-grandfather of the contributor of this was a soldier in the French and Indian Wars, and was with Washington at Braddock's defeat, near Fort Du Quesne, in 1775. Cornelius Comegys, an uncle of John Comegys was an officer under Washington throughout the War of Independence, and after the war was over was assistant in the Treasury Department of the infant republic, under Robert Morris. He was assigned the duty of preparing and signing continental currency, a note of which is in possession of the writer.

Another instance which made John Comegys conspicuous was the distinction of being groomsman to Jerome Bonaparte when he married the wealthy Miss Patterson in Baltimore, in 1805.

SMITH SEES PRESIDENT.

United States Senator John Walter Smith, upon the invitation of the President, called at the White House Saturday at noon. He was with the President for half an hour and because of the fact that the President had been understood to be opposed to his re-election as Senator his visit created amount of speculation. It was Senator Smith's second visit to the White House since the inauguration. The first time he merely went to pay him his respects.

Sena or Smith would not discuss what had been said by Mr. Wilson and himself last night.

"I went to see the President," he said, "upon his invitation, and I had a very pleasant talk with him. That is all I can say about it."

Senator Smith did say, however, that the question of the Senatorship had not been discussed, and when he was told of Mr. Marbury's statement of withdrawal said it was the first he had heard of it.

"I did not know that Mr. Marbury intended to retire," he said, "but I cannot say that I am very much surprised although I had no intimation from any source that he would do so. I cannot say, either, that I regret his retirement, as I am a candidate for re-election, and naturally want as little opposition as possible. While Mr Marbury was my opponent, I had no harsh thing to say of him. He is a gentlemen of good character and fine ideals, although he had never been a regular Democrat. I think his candidacy against me and his fight against me was made upon a misapprehension of my record and purposes and a misunderstanding of myself.

"I do not think had Mr. Marbury been in the Senate in my place during the last eight months he could have given the policies of this Administration or the platform pledges of the Democratic party any stronger or more consistent support than myself. Nor could he have been more constantly in his seat.

"I do not know whether there will come foward some other candidate to take Mr. Marbury's place in the field against me or not. I hope not, but if one does, why, I will just have to give him the best fight I can. When this fight started months ago I told my friends that if I was beaten for re-election I was certainly going to be on hand to see how it was done, and I still feel that way.

"I have been fighting political battles all my life. I have had to fight hard for everything I ever got, and I had rather hoped that this time I would be allowed to get something without fighting for it. In fact, I felt I was entitled to it. I have tried to serve my party and my country in the Senate as faithfully and as well as I could. There are probably plenty of men who could fill the office more brilliantly and who are gifted with greater oratorical powers and ability than I, but I do not think any of them can serve his State more earnestly, his party more loyally or his people more willingly than myself.
