EMMA GILES DISABLED.

With her crank shaft broken, the steamer Emma Giles, Captain Woolford of the Tolchester Company, was tied up at her pier in Annapolis last Saturday night.

The accident occured as the Giles was steaming out of Annapolis harbor for the return trip to Baltimore. She had proceeded less than a mile from her pier.

The steamer Texas, Captain Story, of the Eastern Shore Development Steamship Company, which was about to leave for Claiborne, went to the assistance of the disabled vessel and towed her back to port.

Officers in charge of ships at the Naval Academy also dispatched a launch to ascertain whether further aid was needed The Giles was towed to Baltimore for repairs.

Washington Wins Over Delaware.

In a game that was featured by a large number of penalties imposed on both teams Washington College defeated Delaware Saturday, 13 to 0. In the second quarter Washington probably lost a touchdown when Moore, the peppery little quarterback, was removed from the game for slugging Huston when the ball was on Delaware's five-yard line. As a result his team was penalized 40 yards.

Holding and offside plays were the other offenses which brought penalties that cost both elevens much ground

Three hundred Wilmington High and Wilmington Friends School Students witnessed the game as guest of the Athletic Council, coming to Newark in a special train.

The umpiring of Scott, of Princeton, was very unsatisfactory to Washington College, as his decisions in the first half were so unfair to Washington that they left the field and threatened to stop the game. The Washington College rooters over a hundred strong, were greatly incensed by the umpire's ruling which showed either ignorance of foot-ball or deliberate effort to throw the game to Delaware.

The playing of the whole Washington team was fine and especially Biddle, Ringgold Strong, Lewis, Frampton and Capt. Garrett showed up well.

Ten automobiles from Kent carried Washington rooters to the game.

A MUNICIPAL FARM.

J. Henry Baker, Esq., of Kent, now President of the Baltimore Liquor Board, unites interestingly in part as follows:-

Imagine our city jail depopulated and its buildings used for other civic purposes. Imagine the whole of the jail population transfered to a city farm within a few miles of the city limits, where the old prison grab and discipline give way to modern methods.

Imagine 75 per cent of these men "making good"—being truly reformed rather than merely punish—and saving the city three quarters of a million dollars annually. This is what Kansas City is doing today with its new municipal farm, which is a twentieth century jail that saves men and money.

While in Kansas last week attending a church convention I was deeply impressed with the wonderfully progressive spirit of this most enterprising city of the great Middle West—a city that has spent more money for parks and boulevard development than any city in America—truly a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Kansas City is a place that tries thing not afraid to experiment—and when it finds a good thing keeps it. I am informed by excellent authority that the permission granted prisoners of paying their fines on the installment plan, so much weekly—sort of an "envelope system"—is working admirably—good for the prisoners and saving money for the State.

But the newest and most interesting civic institution and on which promises so much—being now over the "try-out or experimental stage—is called the Municipal Farm. I visited this farm in company with the Rev. Dr. Oliver Huckel, of our city, and we were wonderfully impressed with this institution.

It is located about three miles from the city limits, a farm of 135 acres. One could scarcely realize that we were in a penal institution. There are no cells, but wards, and the work is done mostly out of doors. One of the sources of my information states that the institution has come nearer to solving the crime problem than all of the prison cells in the land.

Life in prison cells promotes physical degeneracy and breeds a morose disposition, which make a convict want to get even with society for depriving him of his liberty. But on the farm every prisoner is set to work, usually in the open air. Crime often comes through mental weakness and low-powered physique.

Work in the open air, wholesome food regular hours and absteminus habits build up the city derelicts and mental condition of the city derelicts and they are returned to society able to stand on their feet like men.

I do not claim to be an expert on penology, but this institution appeals to me both from a humanitarian and economic stand point and well worth investigation by our own municipality.

EGGS 75 CENTS PER DOZEN.

Eggs are so scarce in New York that dealers have put the retail price up to 75 cents a dozen for the best quality, and prospects are that they will go from 3 to 5 cents a dozen higher. The present wholesale price is 62 cents a dozen, although certain brands of Western eggs may be obtained for 43 cents a dozen.

Failure of hens to lay this year and a shortage in the cold storage supply are given by dealers as reasons for the scarcity. With the tariff off imported eggs, many wholesale dealers are planning to bring eggs from abroad to relieve the situation.

Norway, Denmark, Russia and Siberia have surplus supplies of eggs which can be bought cheap enough, dealers say, to be sold here at a profit.
