

RINGS RINGS RINGS

Wedding Rings, Birthday Rings, Signet Rings—Rings of every description. Doing business on a big scale enables us to give you the best values.

Buy a Ring here—for him, for her, or for yourself

$1 to $100 or $1000.

Are you coming to Baltimore soon? If not, write Mr. Crooks to send the articles you wish. Make your choice in your own home.

C. C. CROOKS CO.

114 W. BALTIMORE ST., BALTIMORE.

To Automobile Owners

¶ We have recently installed in our Garage a complete STEAM VULCANIZING PLANT for the repair of Automobile Tires and Tubes, and can do this work in a first-class manner and at a saving to you over city prices.

¶ Have your tires attended to in time. Many times by having a cut or break in a casing vulcanized, you can double your mileage.

¶ We have the only Steam Vulcanizing Plant in Kent or Queen Anne's counties. We carry a large stock of the standard makes of Tires and inner Tubes and can save you money. Let us quote you prices.

¶ We have a complete stock of AUTOMOBILE SUPPLIES, and it will pay you to see us before you buy.

J. H. SIDES, - CENTRAL GARAGE

Cross Street, - - - Chestertown, Md

Free Free Free

$65 Majestic Range

And Fixtures

A $65 Standard Sewing Machine

And 48 Other Prizes

Will be GIVEN AWAY absolutely FREE at GRAHAM & CLEMENTS STORE.

Beginning March 1, 1913, to those who purchase goods at our store for CASH, a ticket will be given with each $1 purchase between that date and December 20, 1913.

To all WHO PAY THEIR NOTES WHEN DUE on or before DECEMBER 20th, 1913, will be given a ticket for each $2.00 paid.

Bill for the book accounts will be mailed out as usual, on or before the First day of July and the First day of December, and to all WHO PAY THEIR BOOK ACCOUNTS during the month of July as rendered July 1st, and during the month of December previous to 2 p. m., on December 20, 1913, as rendered December 1st, will be given one ticket for each $2.00 paid.

Rules for the Distribution of Prizes

For each ticket a duplicate in number will be put in a box, and on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m., the box will be thoroughly shaken by any one who desires to shake it.

A boy will be chosen by those present and he will be blindfolded and proceed to draw the tickets from the box. The first ticket out shall draw the first prize, and the second ticket out, the second prize, etc.

1—A $65.00 Majestic Range, with utensils.
2—A Set of Carrage Harness.
3—A Riding Bridle.
4—A Carving Knife and Fork.
5—A Bread Mixer.
6—A Bissell Carpet Sweeper.
7—An Iron Age Garden Plow.
8—A Percolator Coffee Pot.
9—Keen-Kutter Safety Razor.
10 to 19 Inclusive—A Raw-hide Buggy Whip each.
20 to 30 Inclusive—A Pair of Wiss Scissors, each.
31 to 40 Inclusive—A Good Broom.
41 to 45 Inclusive—A Pair Skates, each.
46, 47, 48—$5 Combination Tool to each.
49—A Disston Hand Saw.
50—A $65.00 Standard Sewing Machine.

Come and bring your tickets Saturday, December 20, 1913, and take the PRIZES home with you, as duplicates of the lucky numbers must positively be presented on Saturday, December 20, 1913, at the drawing, so as to secure a prize.

Duplicate of the lucky number not being presented at the close of the drawing, other numbers will be drawn until all of the prizes are given away.

☞Please do not ask us to exchange other goods for the prizes you draw.

GRAHAM & CLEMENTS

Next Door to the Chestertown Bank of Maryland

CHESTERTOWN, - - - MARYLAND

FARM WAGONS

Now is the time you need a good wagon and we have them on hand We ask you to examine them and see for yourself they are the wagon that will fill your needs. These wagons are built by skilled mechanics out of dry seasoned lumber.

If you need a good WAGON HARNESS we have them and the price is right.

We have a fine assortment of CARRIAGES and RUNABOUTS. Also, a fine line of CARRIAGE HARNESS, FLY NETS and WHIPS.

It will be to your interest to call upon us when you want a good DEARBORN.

Remember we carry a large stock of seasoned LUMBER on hand and it will be to your interest to see us about your repair work.

We have the AMERICAN FENCE in different heights.

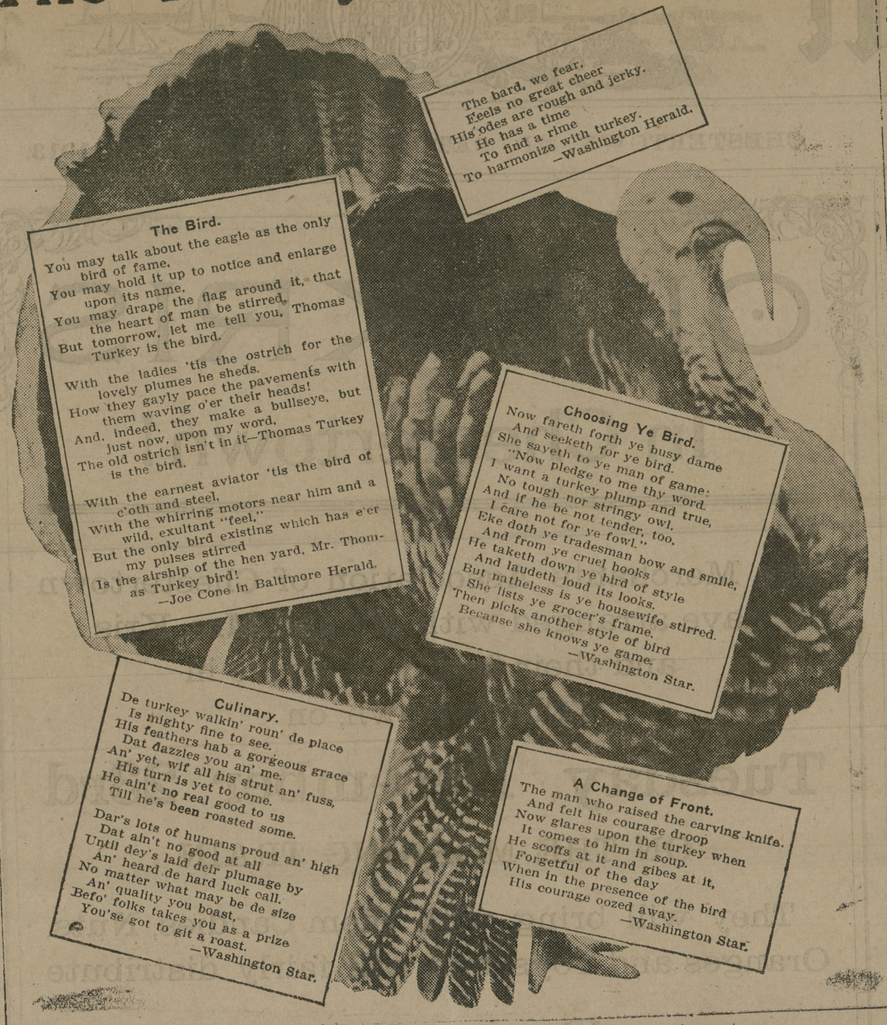

GASOLINE, MACHINE and COAL OIL of best grades.

SHAFER, REDMILE & COMPANY

KENNEDYVILLE, - - MARYLAND

The "KENT NEWS" 1$ Per Year In Advance

The Turkey and the Poets

The Bird.

You may talk about the eagle as the only bird of fame,
You may hold it up to notice and enlarge upon its name,
You may drape the flag around it, that the heart of man be stirred,
But tomorrow, let me tell you, Thomas Turkey is the bird.

With the ladies 'tis the ostrich for the lovely plumes he sheds.
How they gayly pace the pavements with them waving o'er their heads!
And, indeed, they make a bullseye, but just now, upon my word,
The old ostrich isn't in it—Thomas Turkey is the bird.

With the earnest aviator 'tis the bird of c'oth and steel,
With the whirring motors near him and a wild, exultant "feel,"
But the only bird existing which has e'er my pulses stirred
Is the airship of the hen yard, Mr. Thomas Turkey bird!
—Joe Cone in Baltimore Herald.

The bard, we fear,
Feels no great cheer
His odes are rough and jerky.
He has a time
To find a rime
To harmonize with turkey.
—Washington Herald.

Choosing Ye Bird.

Now fareth forth ye busy dame
And seeketh for ye bird.
She sayeth to ye man of game:
"Now pledge to me thy word.
I want a turkey plump and true,
No tough nor stringy owl,
And if he be not tender, too,
I care not for ye fowl."
Eke doth ye tradesman bow and smile,
And from ye cruel hooks
He taketh down ye bird of style
And laudeth loud its looks.
But, natheless is ye housewife stirred.
She lists ye grocer's frame,
Then picks another style of bird
Because she knows ye game.
—Washington Star.

Culinary.

De turkey walkin' roun' de place
Is mighty fine to see.
His feathers hab a gorgeous grace
Dat dazzles you an' me.
An' yet, wif all his strut an' fuss,
His turn is yet to come.
He ain't no real good to us
Till he's been roasted some.

Dar's lots of humans proud an' high
Dat ain't no good at all
Until dey's laid deir plumage by
An' heard de hard luck call.
No matter what may be de size
An' quality you boast,
Befo' folks takes you as a prize
You'se got to git a roast.
—Washington Star.

A Change of Front.

The man who raised the carving knife,
And felt his courage droop
Now gleres upon the turkey when
It comes to him in soup.
He scoffs at it and gibes at it,
Forgetful of the day
When in the presence of the bird
His courage oozed away.
—Washington Star.

ARLINGTON L. SPARKS

Chestertown's Best Store

WE THANK YOU for your past patronage, and in order to demonstrate in a more practical manner than in mere words, also to induce your esteemed favors, we have arranged to give to some one of our customers a present, consisting of the Beautiful Grand Piano

we have now on exhibition.

The value of this instrument is $400.00, and it is guaranteed by the maker for a PERIOD OF TEN YEARS.

We cordially invite you to inspect and try this beautiful instrument You have as good a chance of obtaining this valuable gift as any one. Come to our store and let us explain our method of GIVING AWAY THIS PIANO.

☞We also desire to call your attention to THE MANY SPLENDID VALUES we are now offering in every department of our store.

ARLINGTON L. SPARKS

Phone 79. Chestertown, Maryland

Mrs. Midgeley's Dinner

It Taught Her a Lesson

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Henrietta Midgeley raised her gold lorgnon and peered nearsightedly at the new butler, who lurked in the shadows of the doorway. "What is your name?" she asked sharply.

"'Awkins, ma'am," he replied in a hoarse, unpleasant voice.

"'Awkins—Hawkins; oh, yes," returned Mrs. Midgeley, somewhat startled. "You're English, I suppose?"

"Yes, ma'am, begging your pardon."

"I haven't time to examine your references now, but Major Puddiford Smith said you had—er—buttled for him and that you were all right, so I'll take his word for it. The other man—his name was Hawkins, too—he picked up and left without a word two hours ago because I objected to his spending so much time in the wine cellar."

Mrs. Midgeley thumped heavily from the room, trailing yards of pink silk and lace negligee in her wake.

Four hours later Mrs. Midgeley sat in the splendid drawing room striving heroically not to glance once more at the golden clock on the mantelpiece. It was half past 9, and as yet not one of her invited guests had arrived.

"HIT'S A BALLY SHAME, 'ENRIETTA," BLURTED THE BUTLER.

She had inspected the brilliantly arrayed table with its cut glass and gold and silver and its priceless floral decorations, and she had warmly commended the diffident Hawkins and then had swept her lavender velvet diamonds and orchids into the drawing room, where she waited with growing uneasiness for the first arrival.

Instinctively she had felt the tentative approaches of Hawkins and knew that he was watching her with anxious eyes from some point of vantage. She knew that he must be the bearer of various fiery bulletins from the frantic Pierre in the kitchens below, which of course he dared not deliver. In spite of this soul torturing suspense she must sit perfectly still and pretend to be bored by the delay, and yet she shuddered and wished it were possible for a millionairess to stamp her feet and weep noisily. It would be a great relief!

Poor Midgeley, her husband, had never objected to that sort of thing in the old days when they had lived in a suburb of London and she, his American wife, had kept lodgers, while Midgeley himself had been underfoot man in the house of a duke. Those happy days were in the past—before her uncle in the United States had suddenly died and left her half a dozen gold mines and she had become a great heiress.

Henrietta Midgeley's favorite recreation for years had been novel reading of the paper covered, penny dreadful variety. Therefore, when, like one of the heroines in her favorite novel, she came into her own dowry of wealth there was only one thought in her mind and that was to break into society—not British society, where Midgeley's record as a faithful servant would be a barrier to any attempt at equality with his betters, but that cosmopolitan western half of the United States where every city has its own Society spelled with a capital "S." Henry Midgeley had objected to bombarding society and after a quarrel with his wife had been duly pensioned off.

She had picked out Croesus City because one of her Uncle Frank's gold mines was situated on its outskirts and because she would be the richest woman there. Henrietta made one fatal mistake in selecting Croesus City as the place for her premiere—she did not realize that in this mining city gold was such a common article that there was only one thing that counted there and that was blood. Anybody having the remotest connection with New England or the southern states paraded the fact and was feted accordingly.

Major Puddiford Smith had been a late uncle's lawyer and confidential man of business, and he assured the rich client of Mrs. Puddiford Smith's friendship.

Now, Mrs. Puddiford Smith had been a Puddiford of Connecticut, and she had combined her blooded name with her husband's plebeian though richly endowed appellation and consequently stood proudly on the top rung of the Croesus City social ladder.

A week ago she had given a dinner for Henrietta and invited all the best people in the city, and poor Henrietta had displayed all her ignorance and commonplaceness to the Crumley-Bannertons, the Leachers and the Bowways. They had smiled and talked to her, and Mrs. Midgeley had fluttered and gone away triumphant. A day or two later she committed the fault of sending out dinner invitations to all these people who had never called upon her.

If Mrs. Puddiford Smith had not been suddenly recalled to the Nutmeg State to attend the funeral of a penniless but blooded second cousin she would have discovered Henrietta's mistake and smoothed it over in her inimitable way. But she had departed the very day following her own dinner party.

Ten o'clock chimed out from the gilt clock, and Mrs. Midgeley's face grew pale. She glanced at the velvet portiere and perceived an eye peering at her. It vanished instantly, but she knew that the new butler was cognizant of the social snub she had received. The maids knew, too, and tomorrow all Croesus City would laugh at her.

Somehow Henrietta did not care, but sat drearily staring at her diamond bedecked reflection in the mirror. After awhile she arose and went into the dining room. Hawkins was busying himself near the sideboard.

"My guests did not come, Hawkins," said Henrietta in a quavering tone as she seated herself at the flower decked table. "You can clear away the other plates and bring my dinner."

Hawkins turned the light to a subdued glow, as befitted a dismal situation, and went ponderously to and fro removing the gold and silver and crystal collected at each place and making a neat pile of the hand painted favors Henrietta had taken pride in ordering for the occasion.

Henrietta Midgeley, who was sociable by disposition, found herself interested in the butler's quiet movements as he cleared away the evidences of the uninvited guests.

As he removed her soup plate she spoke to him, more from loneliness than any other motive.

"You are English, aren't you, Hawkins?" she inquired.

"Yes, ma'am, begging your pardon, ma'am," replied Hawkins, disappearing in the pantry.

"Are you married?" pursued Henrietta when he returned with a pair of silver dishes.

"Yes, ma'am." Hawkins' face grew pale as he dodged behind Henrietta's chair.

"Does your wife live here?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"I wonder if she wouldn't like a place in my house. I'm thinking of discharging that French cook. I'm sure he swore at me this morning, but I can't prove it, for I don't understand French. But he looked as if he was swearing."

"You tell me if you 'ear 'im swearin' at you, ma'am, and I'll knock 'is bloomin' 'ead off!" ejaculated Hawkins fiercely, for the moment forgetting the dignity of his office.

"Why, Hawkins, you certainly are loyal. Now, if your wife is a good cook she can have Pierre's place tomorrow."

"My wife is a good cook, ma'am, thanking you, but she's money in 'er hown right and hemploys 'er own cook," returned Hawkins, with dignity.

"Goodness! And she lets you work for a living?" Henrietta was deeply interested and had forgotten her own mortification.

"She 'as pervided for me most liberal, ma'am, but she won't live with me, and therefore I won't touch 'er money," Hawkins spoke with bitter pride.

"She won't live with you?" repeated Henrietta, startled. "Is she—is she ashamed of you?" She blushed as she thought of her own husband, whom she had left in London, rich, but avowedly miserable at parting from his ambitious spouse.

"She said as 'ow I 'ad not the mak in's of a society gent in me, and it was so, ma'am. But she broke my 'eart."

"Just as I suppose I broke poor Midgeley's," quavered Henrietta, bursting into tears. "I left him all alone in London to go into society, and now I hate it all. Look at the way they have treated me." She forgot herself and lifted her voice above its usual low pitch. She hid her face in her jewelled hands, looking ridiculously fat and pudgy by contrast with her splendid surroundings.

"Hit's a bally shame, 'Enrietta," blurted the butler as he folded his arms and stared defiantly at his mistress.

Mrs. Midgeley screamed and arose to her feet. "Whatever do you mean? Why"—she hurried toward him and peered into his round, flushed face with its respectable yellow side whiskers and shaven upper lip—"why—why it's Henry Midgeley! Oh, Henry, Henry; I never was so glad to see anybody in all my life! Let us go back to London and be happy." She fell into his outstretched arms and wept noisily, as she had yearned to do.

After awhile there shot into the room a wrathful Pierre, who flung his white cap and apron on the floor and danced upon them and howled about a spoiled dinner and a ruined reputation and demanded his wages.

It was Midgeley, the erstwhile Hawkins, who paid him his wages and bade him begone, and as the Frenchman witnessed the butler's arm steal around the lavender velvet waist of his mistress the chef's contempt got the better of him. "Canaille!" he hissed disgustedly as he fled, but the reunited husband and wife were too happy to care.

"How do you manage to keep such a clean record with so many of your cranky relations?"

"Just use soft soap."—Baltimore American.

Be Slow to Throw.

After a man has thrown a rock he, nine times out of ten, wishes he had it back in his hand.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Continuous Performance.

Wigwag—My wife is a suffragette. She is going on the lecture platform.
Henpeckke—Huh! My wife doesn't need a platform.—Philadelphia Record.

To The Citizens of Kent and Queen Anne's Counties

WE invite you to call and inspect our FULL LINE OF FURNITURE and FLOOR COVERINGS, &c. We are Headquarters in these lines, carrying the largest assortments that can be found in either of the two counties. In Furniture we have the following—

Bed Room Furniture
Dining Room Furniture
Kitchen Furniture
Chairs, Rockers Library
Tables, Princess Dressers

Our line of Rugs embraces some of the best makes and patterns, including Biglow, Electra, Axminsters and Smith's Axminster and Velvet Rugs. To appreciate these goods you must call and inspect them.

We carry a fine line of Matting, the highest grades and choicest patterns. Linoleum, Oil Cloth and anything in the Floor Covering Line.

Come to see us and be convinced. Our prices are moderate and TERMS LIBERAL.

JOHN BARTLEY

CHESTERTOWN, - - MARYLAND

Williams' Cholera Specific

Prevents and cures Cholera in Hogs. Ask the following dealers about the guarantee on this medicine:

Feddeman & Collins, Millington.
Davis Bros., Galena.
A. R. Chrisfield, Locust Grove.
B. S. Sutton, Blacks.
E. A. Crittenden, Chesterville, Md.
M. A. Toulson, Chestertown.

C. R. WILLIAMS,
Baltimore, Md

jy5-6m.

A CARD TO PUBLIC

I wish to inform the public that I am still in the

Plumbing Business

All Sanitary Plumbing, Heating, etc., will receive expert attention if entrusted to us. Estimates given.

Office and Shop in Automobile Garage, Cannon Street, near Princess

W. C. SUTTON,
CHESTERTOWN, MD

nov9

©Maryland State Archives, msa_sc6000_12_1-0397.jpg