THE THIRD DECADE OF A WANDERING BOY

[Written especially for the Kent News.]

We have been highly favored—we have had a resident judge for many years, and if the people would have stopped to consider there is no doubt but what we would have been favored again. We had with us one of ability, integrity and character who would have made a good judge, a credit to himself and to the people; it may be that it will be a generation before we will be as highly favored again.

Now we have moved our shop from lawyer's row to the old hotel property, adjoining Rev. Nathan Wiley's lumber yard. He owns the house above the lumber yard; on the opposite side of the street is the old jail, and the cemetery wall up to Kitty Toomy. On Saturday afternoon my old friend Wiley comes up and asks me if I won't go to Still Pond with him to-morrow. We start a beautiful Sunday morning, with a beautiful horse and carriage, the horse was called "Cole"; at Goose Hill he began to talk to him, he said, down hill, "hold me on the level", "spare me not," "don't give me water when I am hot."

We got down to the stream, he asked me to get out and unhook him so he could drink. I walked across the bridge, and when he came out, I hooked up his horse and got in. He said to me not much preach for me to-day. I looked down and found that the water had run over his shoes. We went on to Still Pond and he preached. I had heard him do better, as we came home he said to me, that he had at once made up his mind to stop preaching. He went over to Port Deposit and they called on him to preach and in the audience was a man who had a little booze; services were over, he went out behind the man who had a little booze, raised his hand and said, that was the best —— sermon he ever heard.

He said if a poor drunken man thought it was a good sermon he might be able to do some good. He had three children—one kept store, afterwards, where Judge Simpers kept, one went to California and came back and married a daughter of Capt. Kirby at Kirby's Landing, the other a little girl the idol of his heart, whom he use to take to Sunday School every Sunday, who afterwards married my boyhood friend, the Rev. Samuel Thomas, who went to rest last year leaving only two who went to Sunday School with him.

Now in Chestertown we had the old hotel kept by John McDaniel, the older which was said to be one of the best on the shore. Alongside of the hotel was the beautiful property of Major Bowers, next was the great and excellent man who was a great judge, and my old friend and his companion who had an office in after years opposite the lower court house gate. I frequently have seen him and his companion walking over those beautiful grounds and I used to think that they were the handsomest couple I had ever seen.

Now the quaint old courthouse, with its gentlemanly clerk and his father the venerable doctor, in front of the courthouse was the registrar's office covered with a tin roof that I don't think was ever painted, about a story and a half high.

We had a big fire, the two warehouses next to the residence of Judge Chambers were burnt down, and the fire caught to some of the houses next to the bridge among them was the house occupied by Mrs. Wilkins; the fire got up to about six feet. Mr. Ernest and Mr. Westcott came after me to go down there and put the fire out. I started with a bucket brigade beaind me, and a young lady opened the door and showed me how to get to the roof; we got up and put the fire out and wet the roof and came down. I think I went to Williamson Ringgold's house, I was on the roof of several of them that day; the fire was well over.

I will now go back to the young lady who opened the door, a beautiful child she was; she came to our Sunday School and always knew me after that. She married a young captain afterwards who was in the grain business; in after years he and I served on the jury together. I thought he was one of the best men in Kent County. I was in Chestertown one day a good while after that, he said to me I have fixed up a fish bill for our river, we have had trouble, strife and everything with our fishermen, I am coming down to Annapolis to help you to pass the bill; he came with his bill that covered the river to its mouth.

He stayed with me nearly a week. I assure you it was one of best and most pleasant weeks I ever spent in that old city. I suspended rules and got his bill passed. I had many friends in the House those days. I went down and they passed it directly for me. I got it signed by the Govenor then. The balance of our lives we were the best of friends, I had the greatest confidence and respect for him. He had a son who I don't know very well who really I would like to know better on account of the great admiration I had for his father.

WEDDING BELLS.

Miss Carrie Hobbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Clay Hobbs, and Mr. Harry Knotts, of Queen Anne's, both well known in Chestertown were married Friday at noon at the home of the bride by the Rev. Mr. Gaar, of the Denton Methodist Protestant Church. Immediately after the wedding a luncheon was served. The bride was attired in brocaded white crepe and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley. Mrs. Joseph Johnson, of Milton, Pa., was her sister's matron of honor. She wore light green charmeuse and carried pink roses. Little Miss Evelyn Johnson, a niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore white lingerie, trimmed with pink rosebuds, and carried a basket of sweetpeas. Miss Ruby Ahern, of Millington, played the wedding march. Mr. Fred Sylvester was the groom's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Knotts will spend their honeymoon in the Bermuda Islands.
