WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind. — "My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know." — Mrs. DANIEL D. B. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter wil be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Rev. A. H. Covey Says the Large Majority of Kent's Citizens, White and Black, are God-Fearing and Law-Abiding

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: I seldom write for publication, but as a citizen of Kent county and interested in its welfare, I feel compelled to ask for space in your columns in which to tell the simple truth respecting recent developments in our county as connected with the J. R. Coleman murder case.

Most of the reports as published in the papers at the time, as well as much of the correspondence since, have been such a gross misrepresentation of the facts that I feel that it is high time that the simple truth be told and that the sober thought of our populace be publicly expressed.

A large majority of our citizens, both white and colored, are respectful, God-fearing and law-abiding. A large majority of our people take no stock in mob rule. I have lived in three different States, and Kent county is as safe a place in which to live as any I know. We have had a murder about once in 20 years, as good a record, perhaps, as any other section of the country can boast of. But this fact does not support the statement in the Clendaniel-Barroll article published in The Sun a few days ago that "one-half our population are black savages." The murderers of Mr. Coleman do not represent a majority of our colored people. Nor do some of your recent correspondents express sentiments that reflect the feeling of our best whites. In this, as in many cases in our complex civilization, the majority have been compelled to suffer at the hands of a very small minority.

I for one felt most keenly the disgrace which came to us in the presence of the State militia. I for one do not think it was necessary. But I have no disposition to criticise the action of our court in asking for State aid. There was some mob violence—not all boys, either. There was considerable expression of the mob spirit on the part of some of our people. Open threats that the prisoners should not leave Kent county alive were made. Our court knew this and as high-minded, conscientious and courageous public officials they simply prepared themselves to carry out their sworn obligations. There has been some talk of indignation meetings and of the "recall of judicial decisions." But I don't think a majority of our people, after a few months to deliberate, would ever recall the decision of our court just referred to, even though they had the opportunity.

But what we want in Kent county and in the country at large is a more rigid exaltation of justice. Those of us who read have been compelled to notice a decided increase of the spirit of leniency on the part of our people as a whole toward our criminal class. There has grown up in our nation a tolerance of sheer blood-thirstiness, and it is increasingly a stain upon our civilization. We have lost in a measure the true note of authority. For this condition no one class is entirely responsible. In fact, nearly all of us have our share of it to bear. Children are no longer compelled to recognize parental authority in the home. All restraints are gone. Our pulpits proclaim the love and mercy of God, but say little of His justice, while hell fire and damnation are forgotten or denied. Our would-be social reformers tell us that we must not send men to the gallows or the electric chair, or even to the penitentiary, that we must seek to reform by making our appeal to the higher sensibilities. Our courts impose the lightest punishment possible under the law, and our Executives, in response to petition from influential relatives and friends, issue pardons by the wholesale. All this laxity in dealing out justice can have but one effect—an increase of crime, and statistics bear out this statement. We have single cities in this country which commit more crime than the whole of England. Yet England punishes over 90 per cent. of her criminals, while a majority of ours go free. We cannot treat a criminal as we should treat a gentleman, and just as soon as the viciously inclined among us are made to know that the full penalty of the law will be imposed upon those who break the law, regardless of color, social, political or financial position, our criminals will be deterred from committing crime and our people will be freed from the suffering, the humiliation and expense incident thereto. A. H. COVEY.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of MARY E. RASH who departed this life two years ago today, Jan. 14, 1912.

Where the grassy hillock rises,
Where our lovely darling sleeps,
Nothing now can hurt nor harm her
Jesus safe her spirit keeps.
Shall we grieve because she's happy,
Shall we wish her back to weep?
No, we'll joy because our Saviour
Placed our lamb among His sheep.

POULTRY NOTES

Mrs. Arthur L. Harris writes to the NEWS as follows:

"We have hundreds of men and women who are trying to make some money by raising poultry; either to save their own butcher's bill, or to sell to the city man. The "slaughter of the innocents" each year due to ignorance, is tremendous. Chickens "get sick" from no cause apparently, and in a few days our whole profit is gone.

"Now every one knows there is a right and a wrong way of doing everything. If left to ourselves we could not get much of an education. By going to school we get the benefits of experience, knowledge, and superior intelligence of men who are recognized as educated men. If we decided that we wanted to become an engineer, we would have to go and study if we would make a success of it. So with every line of work. The time has come when education spells the difference between success and failure, and our county schools must look out for it.

"After school, what then? Our Agricultural College is waiting to solve the problems for us, if we will have it done. During the week of Jan. 19 the most practical poultry men will be ready to help us raise our chickens, if we will let them. The question is, Will we?

Now these men did not get their information out of a book; they got it by setting 100 hens, where we set one; by keeping everything clean while we are often careless; by keeping accounts, which we often neglect, in short, by making a business out of what most farmers neglect. If we want to learn to hatch all the eggs we set, and raise nearly all we hatch, we can learn by 'taking a vacation.' A trip for one week at M. A. C. would be like a delightful visit to congenial friends. We are made to feel so much at home by the professors and their wives and the students that the week rushes past, and in a little while we are back our heads and notebooks full of good ideas, a couple of pounds of surplus flesh on our bones (due to good "feeds") and a firm determination to make good, so as to show the State of Maryland that we appreciate the way that part of the taxes is being spent, anyway.

EGG PRODUCTION.

How I Made My Hens Lay Last Winter.

My flock of about 75 Rhode Island Reds and Silver Laced Wyandottes were given free range on the farm in good weather. Rye, clover, and oats were all growing within their range, and furnished an abundance of green feed which is indispensable. In snowy, bad weather they were kept up, and not allowed to run on the snow and ice, as that checks egg production. They were confortably housed in a 10x16 house, tight on all save the south side, which was slatted with two-inch slats. A supply of fresh, not ice-cold, water, crushed oystershells, grit and charcoal was kept within their reach at all times. Their roosts and nests were kept free from vermin. A spray pump with an emulsion of crude carbolic acid and kerosene and a supply of "Uncle Jo's" insect powder, which I easily made myself of plaster-of-paris, crude carbolic acid and gasoline, made this an easy task. No lousy hen can lay well, if at all, so the care you take in this particular is more important than the feed you give them.

Having free range, they were fed only twice a day, about two gallons of corn and oats at a feed. The oats were some times given them unshelled—just bundles from the barn scattered in their scratching shed, where in bad weather they found plenty of exercise scratching for them. All the bones from the kitchen were carefully saved and beaten twice or three times a week with an old hatchet. We kill a goodly number of hogs at several different times, I have enough green bone to do them a great deal of good. All scraps of meat and vegetables are given them also.

Being a busy housekeeper with small children to attend to, I had no time to give them warm mashes, to have trapnests, or to keep individual records. But when I made my rounds twice a day to collect eggs I did not fail to bring in from three to five dozen eggs per day. I kept no exact record of how many were gathered, but did keep a pad and pencil hanging on a convenient hook in the kitchen and kept an account of all eggs sold. After using plentifully, for I recognize the food value of eggs, for a family of seven, my book shows sales amounting to $50 03 from November 1, 1912, to March, 1913. From January 1 to date (October 18), I have sold eggs, a few early broilers at 35 aents per pound and some old hens, amounting to $109.59. I do not raise poultry for the market—merely market the surplus. But when my children are larger, I shall at least double the number of hens kept.

There is certainly money to be made in the poultry business, if one only pays attention to the welfare of their fowls. Expensive equipment is not necessary in the South.—Mrs. J. M. Roberts, in The Progressive Farmer.

Three Hundred Suits A Minute!—If you walk into the store of Bordley & Sons, Chestertown, you will see exactly three hundred suits in a minute, a hundred overcoats, and two hundred boys' suits. Every one of these suits will be offered without reserve at exactly one-fourth off the original price. The rest of January and all of February, this merchandise will go at these low figures and if you have not gotten your suit or overcoat yet, and believe in saving a $5.00 bill, talk to Bordley & Sons and be convinced. Their windows will tell the tale of an absolutely bonafide mid-winter reduction sale. Investigate! Investigate!
