HOPKINS DEFEATS WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Great Dissatisfaction With The Unfair Rulings of Umpire Murphy Who Gave Washington a Very Bad Deal.

Hopkins defeated Washington College at footbalt in Baltimore on Saturday last 14 to 7, according to the figures on the scoreboard at Homewood, but there was some doubt about a goal on each side, and the score according to the count of some of the players was 13 to 6—the judgment of the referee on the matter has not become widely known.

It was a peculiar game, in that the first half showed Hopins' superiorty; the second revealed Washington's strength.

Hopkins scored her points in the first half with apparent ease; Washington hers in the second with apparently much less effort than Hopkins put forth. The Baltimore papers all noted this. The Sun said Hopkins went to pieces in the second half. The American said Washington made Hopkins' line look like paper. The News said Hopkins was more than outplayed in the second.

It looks, therefore, as if a team that could show such reserve strength in the closing periods of the game, might be considered stronger than the opponent; and if the machine could have started moving a little earlier, there would have been a different score on the board Just why Washington allowed Hopkins to get the jump on her is hard to tell.

In weight, training, endurance, variety of play—indeed in all points of the game, Washington showed to such advantage that it is difficult to explain why that advantage did not make itself felt in the first half as well as the second.

Forward passess, end runs, line plunges, succeeded one another in such quick succession and with such material gains that Hopkins was played off its feet, and with a little more time Washington must have won.

At the start, tho', it looked as if Washington was suffering from stage fright. Fumbles were frequent; Hopkins' formations went through unbroken and ours were badly maintained; tackling was high and ineffective, ground-gaining seemed impossible. In the second all was changed. The team seemed to find itself, and if it plays the the same kind of ball the remainder of the season as it did the second half of the Hopkins game, nothing more will be asked of it.

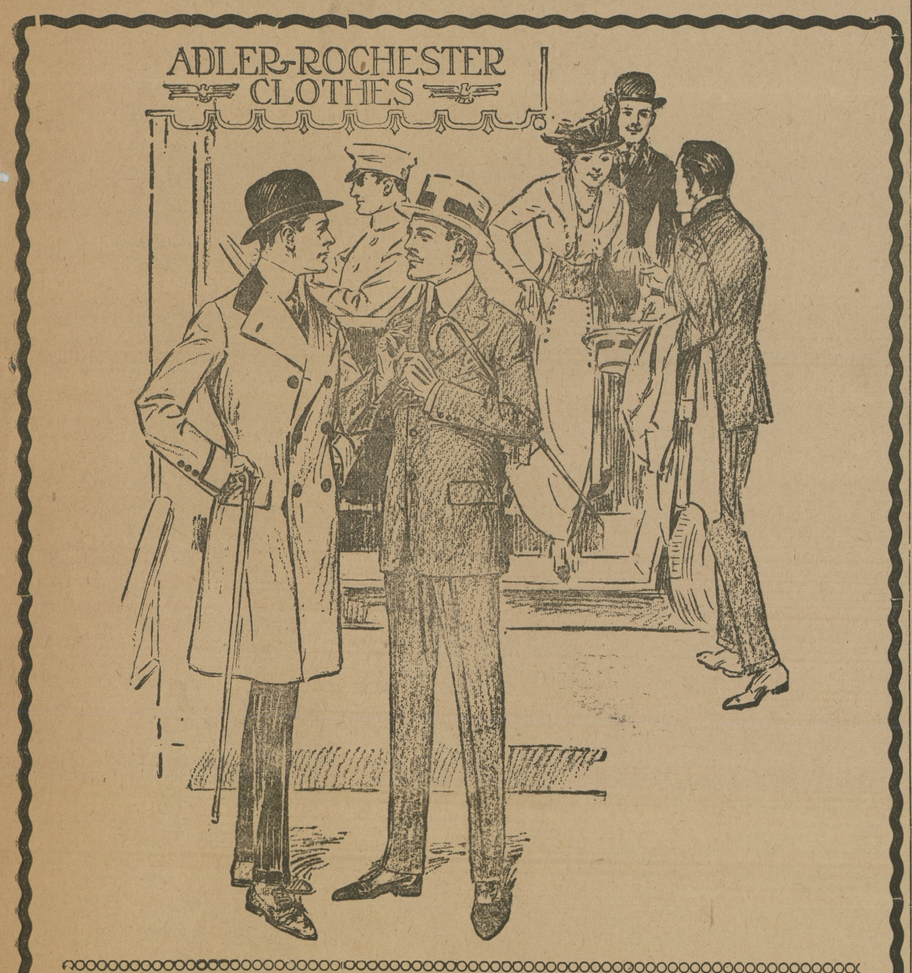

A word as to officials. We think a mistake was made in allowing a change to Baltimore men, but the change was made so late that Washington had either to accept it or withdraw from the contest. To hundreds on the field the officials were to say the least very strict with the Washington players. Their rulings showed which way their sympathies tended, and their decisions were practically all against Washington. Frampton crashed through the Hopkins line, evaded the entire Hopkins second defense, planted the ball back of goal posts for a touchdown, only to be called back on a ruling of "holding" by the Washington team. But there was no claim of holding coming from Hopkins, nor could the umpire tell who was the guilty Washingtonian, nor whether it was in the line or background. He only knew there was holding—that was sufficient. To a layman it would appear that from the standpoint of self-defense an official should be able and willing to make his ruling as plain and satisfactory as possible. Again, to the uninitiated Hopkins was guilty time and again of hurdling. But nothing was said about it. Spectators, unknown to the few Washington supporters, raised yell after yell in opposition to it. It went all the same. Twice it looked as if we had recovered the ball from fumbles by Hopkins, but the ball was given back.

To a blind man it appeared as if Frampton with a clear field and an easy catch was jostled by a Baltimore player, enough to cause interference, but nothing came of the protest. Holding by Hopkins outside the zone of the play went on unseen, although it was apparent to those on the side lines, and altogether the Eastern Shore boys were the sufferers.

Of course a Washington symyathizer might be prejudiced and see things one-sided, too. We do not wish to do injustice to anybody, but while we may feel strongly and be unable to judge dispassionately, it is also equally true that Baltimore officials want to see Hopkins win every time, and with the very best intentions, may make mistakes. We think they made many. The Hopkins men played a clean game; so did Washington. The Baltimore papers commented favorably on this.

For Washington the whole back field played well, and until he was hurt, Sterling in the line played "Heavy" Wilkinson to a standstill. A most encouraging feature for Washington was the good work of the substitutes. White, Wallace, Mann all did well, and give promise of valuable aid whenever called on. A striking feature of the game was that Hopkins used four former Washington College foot ball stars, namely, Capt. Wilkinson, Pfitsch, Joe and Jack Branham, and they all four played fine.

Washington will play the strong Western Maryland College team this afternoon at Chestertown. Game called at 3 o'clock.
