LIME NECESSARY FOR SWEET CLOVER GROWTH.

Does Not Flourish In Eastern Soils That Lack Lime.

NICKOLAS SCHMINTZ.
Maryland Agricultural College Experiment Station Service.

On our Maryland soils and most of the soils in neighboring states, especially in the Coastal Plain section, it is almost as difficult to grow sweet clover as it is to grow alfalfa. In other words, we find that in such of our soils as are worn out, outside of limestone areas require lime and inoculation for the successful growth of sweet clover, the same as is required for alfalfa. This has been proven quite thoroughly in many instances; for example, the writer had a notion several years ago that the best way to inoculate the soil for alfalfa in the East was to first grow sweet clover—at the same time this crop would be increasing the fertility—but he found that in practically every case the sweet clover refused to grow unless the soil was limed and inoculated.

In the higher elevated section, where cowpeas will not grow well, it may under some conditions be advisable to sow sweet clover, after liming and inoculating, and then allow the land to remain idle for a few years in order to give the sweet clover a chance to build up the fertility. But even this could not be considered favorably where it is necessary to derive an income from the land while it is being improved.

For some reason, livestock in the East has not as yet taken as kindly to pasturing on sweet clover as it has in the South and West. Along our waterfronts in Maryland we have many farms that have had sweet clover growing on them for generations, but it is seldom that cattle eat it in grazing. They may go through a wheat stubble field, eat the grass and other clovers, but leave the sweet clover. There is no question, however, but that they could be taught by starvation to eat and thrive on it, but it is doubtful if they will thrive any better on sweet clover than on the common clovers.

Sweet clover does not cure into hay as well as alfalfa and the ordinary clovers. In curing sweet clover the leaves shatter off very badly, so that unless a great deal of care in the process is exercised the hay will be little more than stems; these, however, are usually relished by all livestock if the crop is cut early enough so that the stems are not too tough and woody.

INTERESTING THE BOYS IN A NEIGHBORHOOD SPECIALTY.

Speaker At State Grange Meeting Urges Study Of Selection Of Seed Corn.

J. E. METZGER.
Maryland Agricultural College.

It may seem a foolish thing to have children take strips of cloth 36 inches long and 9 inches wide and mark them off in squares of two inches each. To then take of the father's seed corn and remove six kernels from each ear in such a way that there be two kernels secured from the base of the ear, two from the middle and two from the part near the tip; to then take these kernels and carefully lay them in the numbered squares and also label the ears to correspond to the numbers of the squares; to place these ears in a pail of moistened sawdust, or cover them with moistened paper; to place the pail with the folded cloths filled with corn in a warm room, and after six or seven days to unfold the little cloth bundle and see what has happened. We call the whole thing a rag doll, but the Chicago Board of Trade, through its representative, Mr. Ball, estimates that this little scheme which is being carried out by the rural schools will be the means of increasing the corn crop of the United States by at least one half billion dollars without increasing the area devoted to corn a single acre. It is not a matter without any importance when a magazine of the standing of the Outlook will give it two pages in a single issue.

A YOUNG CORN BREEDER.

Not only is it practical for the boys and girls of the school to study the vitality of corn, but it is profitable for them to make a study of the selection of seed corn, of how to cure it, and even how to shell and grade it. They will, through the study of the ear, learn which is the best corn of the locality, and in probably this locality, as many others have already done, will make itself famous in the production of a particular variety of special merit.

Here's Proof

Charles Johnson, P. O. Box 105, Lawton's Station, N. Y., writes: "I sprained my ankle and dislocated my left hip by falling out of a third story window six months ago. I went on crutches for four months, then I started to use some of your Liniment, according to your directions, and I must say that it is helping me wonderfully. I threw my crutches away. Only used two bottles of your Liniment and now I am walking quite well with one cane. I never will be without Sloan's Liniment."
