HAIL SLASHES CROP

Causes Heavy Damage In Howard, Anne Arundel And Eastern Shore Counties.

Grain almost ready for harvest was cut to pieces, corn was stripped, vegetation was slashed, fruit driven from the trees, window panes in public and private buildings broken, animals pelted until they almost dropped and poultry was killed Tuesday afternoon in one of the most damaging hail storms that has ever visited the Western and Eastern Shores of the State.

The counties in which the storm was most severe were Howard, Anne Arundel, Talbott, Wicomico, Cecil and the western part of Baltimore. The city escaped with a gentle shower and the atmosphere was made cooler from the hail that fell just outside the borders. The hail stones were reported in the different sections of the State as being as large as a man's clenched hand, weighing a half pound, as large as a robin's egg, the size of an acorn' two and a half inches in diameter, as large as hickory nut and as big as a hen egg.

Driven by a heavy wind and accompanied by thunder and lightning, the storm swept along in wide paths and laid waste to every growing thing. Farmers who visited their fields and truck patches after the storm were amazed to find what damage had been done. Wheat, oats rye lay flat on the ground, corn, was stripped so that only the bare stalk remained, strawberries were beaten from the vines, shrubbery was ruined, tomatoes, cantaloupes and watermelons were cut to pieces and green fruit covered the orchards.
